INFORMATION TO USERS

This manuscript has been reproduced from the microfilm master. UMI films the text directly from the original or copy submitted. Thus, some thesis and dissertation copies are in typewriter face, while others may be from any type of computer printer.

The quality of this reproduction is dependent upon the quality of the copy submitted. Broken or indistinct print, colored or poor quality illustrations and photographs, print bleedthrough, substandard margins, and improper alignment can adversely affect reproduction.

In the unlikely event that the author did not send UMI a complete manuscript and there are missing pages, these will be noted. Also, if unauthorized copyright material had to be removed, a note will indicate the deletion.

Oversize materials (e.g., maps, drawings, charts) are reproduced by sectioning

the original, beginning at the upper left-hand corner and continuing from left to right in equal sections with small overlaps.

Photographs included in the original manuscript have been reproduced xerographically in this copy. Higher quality 6" x 9" black and white photographic prints are available for any photographs or illustrations appearing in this copy for an additional charge. Contact UMI directly to order.

Bell & Howell Information and Learning 300 North Zeeb Road, Ann Arbor, MI 48106-1346 USA

UN 1 800-521-0600

An Examination of Bint al-Shāṭi"s Method of Interpreting the Qur'ān

by Sahiron Syamsuddin

A thesis submitted to the Faculty of Graduate Studies and Research in partial fulfillment of the requirements for the degree of Master of Arts

> Institute of Islamic Studies McGill University June 1998

© Sahiron Syamsuddin

National Library of Canada

Acquisitions and Bibliographic Services

395 Wellington Street Ottawa ON K1A 0N4 Canada Bibliothèque nationale du Canada

Acquisitions et services bibliographiques

395, rue Wellington Ottawa ON K1A 0N4 Canada

Your file Votre référence

Our file Notre reférence

The author has granted a nonexclusive licence allowing the National Library of Canada to reproduce, loan, distribute or sell copies of this thesis in microform, paper or electronic formats.

The author retains ownership of the copyright in this thesis. Neither the thesis nor substantial extracts from it may be printed or otherwise reproduced without the author's permission.

L'auteur a accordé une licence non exclusive permettant à la Bibliothèque nationale du Canada de reproduire, prêter, distribuer ou vendre des copies de cette thèse sous la forme de microfiche/film, de reproduction sur papier ou sur format électronique.

L'auteur conserve la propriété du droit d'auteur qui protège cette thèse. Ni la thèse ni des extraits substantiels de celle-ci ne doivent être imprimés ou autrement reproduits sans son autorisation.

0-612-43960-7

Dedicated to my parents, my parents-in-law, my beloved wife Zuhroul Fauwziyah, my daughter Ellina Vinajahi Shafa, my brothers and my sisters

Abstract

Author : Sahiron Syamsuddin

Title : An Examination of Bint al-Shāṭi"s Method of Interpreting

the Qur'an

Department : Institute of Islamic Studies

Degree : M. A.

This thesis is devoted to the study of Bint al-Shāṭi''s method of interpreting the Qur'ān. The problems of consistency in terms of her hermeneutical theory and of the application of this method represent the focus of the study. It furthermore discusses her attitude towards tendentious and i'jāz-misoriented interpretations of the Qur'ān, of which both classical and modern exegetes are guilty in her eyes. Secondly, it studies how she applies her method in specific situations. The cross-referential method, and the concept of irtibāṭ (interrelation between verses) are two major points to be analyzed. Finally, it also discusses her theory concerning the asbāb al-nuzuī (occasions of revelation), and its application. Using phenomenological, comparative and analytical methods of analysis, and by means of primary and secondary sources, the thesis concludes that Bint al-Shāṭi' in many cases is not consistent in applying the method she established.

Résumé

Auteur : Sahiron Syamsuddin

Titre : Un examen de la méthode d'interpretation qur'anique de Bint al-Shāṭi'

Département: Institut des Études Islamiques

Diplôme : Maîtrise ès Arts

Ce mémoire se consacre à l'étude de la méthode d'interprétation qur'anique de Bint al-Shați'. Les problèmes de la consistance la théorie herméneutique de l'auteur ainsi que l'application de cette méthode représentent l'orientation de cette étude. De plus, la recherche débattera, en premier lieu, de l'attitude de Bint al-Shāți' envers les interprétations tendencieuses et erronées de i'jaz (inimitabilité) du Qur'an auxquelles à la fois les exégètes classiques et modernes, aux yeux de l'auteur, se sont rendus coupables. Deuxièmement, la recherche étudira comment Bint al-Shāti' applique sa méthode dans des situations spécifiques. La méthode confrontant les références, ainsi que le concept d'irtibat (rapport entre vers) sont deux points majeurs qui y seront analysés. Finalement, l'étude débattera de la théorie de l'auter concernant l'asbab al-nuzul (occasions de la révélation) ainsi que de son application. En utilisant les méthodes phénoménologique, comparative et critique, grâce aux sources primaires et secondaires, ce mémoire conclut que, dans plusieurs cas, l'application de la méthode de Bint al-Shāṭi' n'est pas consistante.

Acknowledgements

I would like to thank first of all the ministry of religious affairs of the Republic of Indonesia, the CIDA and the McGill-Indonesia Project for the grant which enabled me to study at the Institute of Islamic Studies, McGill University. I also wish to express my gratitude to Dr. Issa J. Boullata for the valuable remarks on this thesis, which he supervised, as well as on other work with him I have done while pursuing the M. A. program. I also thank the principal of IAIN (State Institute of Islamic Studies) Sunan Kalijaga of Yogyakarta, and the dean of the Ushuluddin Faculty of the institute for their encouragement and support. I am also grateful to Steve Millier for editing my thesis, and the staff of the Islamic studies library, especially Salwa Ferahian and Wayne St. Thomas, for their help in providing the sources used in this thesis. As well, I should like to thank my friends Alan Guenther, Yudian Wahyudi, Achmad Zaini, Andi Nurbaethy, Inna Muthmainnah, Al Makin and Siti Handarah for lending me books, and Hamdiah Latif for helping me with German citations. Lastly, but not least, I am grateful to my parents, my parents-in-law, my beloved wife Zuhroul Fauziyah, and my daughter Ellina Vinajahi Shafa, for encouraging me to finish my course of study on time.

Table of Contents

Abstract		ü
Résumé		iii
Acknowledger	nents	iv
Table of Conte	nts	v
The Systems o	f Transliteration	vii
Introduction		1
Chapter One	: Bint al-Shāṭi''s Criticism of Previous Exegetical Tradition
	in Islam	9
	I. On Tendentious Interpretation
	II. On "Forced" and I'jaz-Misoriented Interpretations	29
Chapter Two	: Fundamental Elements of Bint al-Shāṭi"s Method of
	Interpretation	44
	I. The Cross-referential Method
	A. In the Classical Tradition	44
	B. Bint al-Shāṭi's Theory	47
	C. Her Application of the Method	50
	1. Her interpretation of Surat al-'Aṣr (Q. 103)	52
	2. The Case of hurriyat al-'aqida	66
	II. Irtibat al-Avat wa al-Suwar (Interconnection

Between Verses and Chapters)	73
Chapter Three : Bint al-Shāṭi"s Attitude Towards Asbāb al-Nuzul:
Between Theory and Application	83
I. Her Treatment of Asbab al-Nuzul Reports	85
II. The Significance of Asbab al-Nuzul	90
III. The Issue Surrounding the Idea of the 'Ibra
(Decisive Point)	96
Conclusion	103
Bibliography	108

-

The System of Transliteration

The system of transliteration of Arabic words and names applied in this thesis is that used by the Institute of Islamic Studies, McGill University, with only slight modifications.

$$J = I$$

$$_{j}=r$$

$$z = th$$
 $z = z$ $z = th$ $z = n$

$$=$$
 j

$$= j$$
 $= s$ $= gh$ $= w$

$$r = h$$

$$t = h$$
 ف $t = sh$ ان $t = h$

$$\Delta = h$$

$$J = d$$

$$\mathbf{d} = \mathbf{d}$$
 ف $\mathbf{d} = \mathbf{k}$ و $\mathbf{y} = \mathbf{y}$

Short: 1 = a; = i; 1 = u. Long: $1 = \bar{a}; = \bar{i}; = \bar{u}$

Diphthongs: $\sqrt{1} = ay$; $\sqrt{1} = aw$.

Long vowel with tashdid: for and i, iya and iwa are employed.

In the case of ta' marbutah (;) h is not written, unless it occurs within an idafah, where it is transliterated with at.

The hamzah (\uparrow) occurring in the initial position is omitted.

Introduction

This thesis is devoted to the study of the Qur'anic hermeneutical method that Bint al-Shaṭi', an Egyptian woman scholar of this century, applies in her works on Qur'anic studies. It deals with the development of her method, and with her theories concerning its application in particular cases. The problem of her consistency, or lack of thereof, is one of the chief concerns in this thesis.

Amīn al-Khūlī (d. 1966) points out in his Manāhij Tajdīd that attempts to interpret the Qur'ān seem never to cease.¹ In the light of both Islamic doctrine and historical perspectives, his statement rings true. There is no disagreement among Muslims that the Qur'ān was revealed as religious guidance for all humankind,² valid from the time of its revelation to the Prophet Muḥammad until the Day of Judgement. This doctrine, however, results in the constant need for understanding the Qur'ān. Even the Prophet Muḥammad was ordered to explain the Qur'ānic message to his Companions.³ After his death, his Companions (ṣaḥāba), such as 'Abd Allāh ibn 'Abbās,⁴ and their Successors ¹Amin al-Khūli, Manāhij Tajdid fi al-Naḥw wa al-Balāgha wa al-Tafsir wa al-Adab (Cairo: Dār al-Ma'rifa, 1961), 302.

²See, e.g., Q. 2 (S. al-Baqara): 185; Q. 3 (S. Al 'Imran): 138; and Q. 5 (S. al-Malida: 49.

³See, e.g., Q. 2 (S. al-Baqara): 221; Q. 5 (S. al-Ma⁷ida): 16 and 21.

⁴It is recorded that Mujāhid transmitted Ibn 'Abbās' Tafsir. See, for example, Muḥammad ibn 'Alī al-Dāwūdī, Ṭabaqāt al-Mufassirin, edited by 'Alī Muḥammad 'Umar (Cairo: Maktabat Wahba, 1972), 1: 232-3.

(tabi'un), such as Mujāhid (d. 104/722)⁵ and Qatāda (d. 118 A.H.),⁶ continued the attempt to grasp the message of the Qur'ān. The interpretations of this formative period were later compiled in hadīth (prophetic tradition) works, such as that of al-Bukhārī (d. 256/870). The exegetical works of classical times, such as that of Ibn Jarīr al-Ṭabarī (d. 310/923), are colored to a great extent by the reports from previous generations. The reports-oriented approach, however, was not the only way of interpreting the Qur'ān in the classical period. Lexical, rhetorical, philosophical, and mystical approaches to the Qur'ān, such as those of al-Zamakhsharī (d. 538/1144), al-Rāzī (d. 606/1210), and Ibn al-'Arabī (d. 638/1240) also represented other methods of interpretations in that period. Modern exegetes, such as Muḥammad 'Abduh (d. 1905), have employed other hermeneutical methods, most of which emphasize the Qur'ān as a guidance for human lives (hudan li al-nās). Some, such as Ṭantāwī Jawharī (d. 1941) have tried to impose modern science on the Qur'ānic message in their exegetical works.

Looking at the history of the discipline, one can say that the interpretations of the Qur'an that satisfied one generation did not always satisfy the next. This is certainly true for many Muslim scholars of our own day. Bint al-Shāṭi', a modern exegete, for example, says that classical interpretations in many ways subjected the Qur'an to interpretation in the light of extraneous elements, ⁵It is alleged that Shibl ibn 'Abbād al-Makki transmitted Mujāhid's tafsir. See, e.g., al-Dāwūdī, Ṭabaqāt al-Mufassirin, 2: 305-8.

⁶Shaybān ibn 'Abd al-Raḥmān reported that he received tafsir from Qatāda ibn Di'āma. See al-Dāwūdī, Ṭabaqāt al-Mufassirīn, 2: 43-4.

such as the <code>isra iliyal</code> (Judeo-Christian materials), and to sectarian tendencies (<code>alta'wilal</code> al-'aṣabiya), neither of which are really necessary for understanding the Qur'anic message. She also accuses many interpreters of producing "forced" interpretations, and others of simply misunderstanding the unique rhetoric of the Qur'an. In response to this situation, Bint al-Shāṭi' composed many works on Qur'anic studies, such as <code>al-Tafsir</code> al-Bayani li <code>al-Qur'an</code> al-Karim (Rhetorical Exegesis of the Qur'an) in two volumes, <code>al-Qur'an</code> wa <code>al-Tafsir</code> al-'Aṣrī (the Qur'an and Modern Exegesis), <code>al-Shakhṣiya</code> al-Islamiya (the Islamic Personality) and others. To achieve this purpose, Bint al-Shāṭi' develops and employs the method that her professor Amīn al-Khūlī (who later became her husband) explained in his book <code>Manahij</code> Tajdiā.8

To my knowledge, there have appeared at least six works focusing on Bint al-Shāṭi's exegesis. First, Kenneth Cragg in his The Mind of the Qur'an (published in 1973), describes some of Bint al-Shāṭi''s techniques of interpreting the Qur'an, concentrating especially on her treatment of Q. 93 (Surat al-Duḥa). Here, Cragg appreciates her bravery in criticizing past interpreters. Secondly, and more comprehensively, Issa J. Boullata in his article "Modern Qur'anic Exegesis: A Study of Bint al-Shāṭi''s Method," published in 1974, describes the great influence of Amin al-Khūli's method on Bint al-Shāti's tafsir. He also analyzes many of her new hermeneutical findings. 10 Thirdly, like Boullata, J. J. G. Jansen concentrates in his 1974 book The Interpretation of the Koran in Modern Egypt on Bint al-Shāṭi's debt to al-Khūlī in the field of methodology of interpretation. He argues his case, as Cragg does, on the basis of her interpretation of Q. 93.11 Fourth, there is Muhammad 'Atā al-Sid's 1975 dissertation entitled "The Hermeneutical Problem of the Qur'an in Islamic History," in which he studies Bint al-Shāti"s hermeneutics. As he himself acknowledges, his study is very much dependent on Boullata's conclusions. In this work, however, he uncovers new information in the form of critiques by scholars of Bint al-Shāṭi"s hermeneutics concerning the problem of the consistency of the Qur'anic language, and the asbab al-nuzul (occasions of revelation). His approach, however, seems too apologetic, too concerned to defend Bint al-Shāti's position. 12 Fifth, we have Muhammad Amin's 1992 master's thesis written for McGill University, entitled "A Study of Bint al-Shāṭi"s Exegesis." In his thesis, he provides a biography of Bint al-Shāṭi' and investigates her exegetical

⁷See 'A'isha 'Abd al-Raḥmān (Bint al-Shāṭi'), al-Tafsir al-Bayāni li al-Qur'ān al-Karim (Cairo: Dār al-Ma'ārif, 1990), 1: 16; and 2: 8.

⁸See Bint al-Shāṭi', al-Tafsir al-Bayāni, 1: 10.

See Kenneth Cragg, The Mind of The Qur'an, Chapters in Reflection (London: George Allen & Unwin Ltd, 1973), 70-74.

¹⁰See Issa J. Boullata, "Modern Qur'ānic Exegesis: A Study of Bint al-Shāṭi'," The Muslim World 64 (1974), 103-13.

¹¹See J.J.G. Jansen, The Interpretation of the Koran in Modern Egypt (Leiden: E. J. Brill, 1974), 65-76.

¹²See Muḥammad 'Atā al-Sīd, "The Hermeneutical Problem of the Qur'an in Islamic History" (Ph.D disssertation, Temple University, 1975), 341-7.

achievements. However, his discussion of the latter is likewise dependent on Boullata's findings, and is very descriptive. Generally speaking, these five contributions are appreciative of Bint al-Shāṭi''s method of interpretation. Finally and by contrast, Muhammad Amin Tawfiq, in his 1976 article "Interpretation and Lessons of Surah 'al-Duḥā''' takes a critical approach to her methodology, especially regarding the issue of the qasam (oath). However, Tawfiq is not convincing due to his misunderstanding of Bint al-Shāṭi''s approach to her subject. 14

The purpose of this thesis is to examine Bint al-Shāṭi''s exegetical method. In order that the thesis should focus on the main subject, I will not explore her biography, except in a note.¹⁵ In the following pages I will attempt to shed new ¹³See Muḥammad Amīn, "A Study of Bint al-Shāṭi"s Exegesis" (M.A. Thesis, McGill University, 1992), 47-90.

¹⁴See Muhammad Amin Tawfiq, "Interpretation and Lessons of Surah 'al-Duḥā'', Majallatu'l Azhar (1976), 7-16.

¹⁵ Bint al-Shāti' was the pen-name of 'A'ishah 'Abd al-Rahmān. She was born in Dumyat (Damietta) in 1913. She was educated traditionally by her father, who would not allow her to attend a public school. However, thanks to her mother and maternal great-grand-father, who concealed her attendance at a public school, she was able to finish her education there. In 1936 she enrolled in the Faculty of Letters at Fuad I University (later Cairo University). She completed a doctoral degree in 1950 with a dissertation on the poetry of Abū al-'Alā' al-Ma'arri. She then went on to teach at several universities in succession, and to write many books and articles on various fields, such as Qur'anic studies, literary criticism, feminism, history and autobiography, and creative writing. According to Muhammad Amin and Hoffman-Ladd, she wrote more than sixty books in the above fields. Abaza al-Sabi'i divides Bint al-Shati"s works into two kinds: (1) Qur'anic and Islamic studies, and (2) general studies, listing 40 books that she wrote during her lifetime. For more information, see C. Kooji, "Bint al-Shāti': A Suitable Case for Biography?," in The Challenge of the Middle East, edited by Ibrāhim A. El-Sheikh et al. (Amsterdam: University of Amsterdam, 1982), 67-72; Muhammad Amin, "A Study of Bint al-Shāṭi"s Exegesis," 6-23; Valerie J. Hoffman-Ladd, "'A'isha 'Abd al-Raḥmān," in The Oxford Encyclopedia of the Modern Islamic World, edited by John L.

light on Bint al-Shāṭi''s exegesis by analyzing her method. In many places, critical analyses will be expressed. There are in fact three questions in particular that will be answered in this thesis. First, how and why does Bint al-Shāṭi' develop her hermeneutical method? This is very much related to her attitude towards previous interpretation. Secondly, where does Bint al-Shāṭi''s method place her in the history of the interpretation of the Qur'ān? Finally, is she consistent in applying the method she established?

To answer these questions, the thesis will be divided into three chapters and a conclusion. Chapter one discusses Bint al-Shāṭi''s critical attitude regarding past exegetes. In this chapter, we will try to determine why she criticized previous interpretations to such a great extent, and how she built her own method, which she calls "al-manhaj al-istiqrā'ī" (inductive method), and which I refer to in this thesis as the cross-referential method. Chapter two examines what Amīn al-Khūlī calls "dirasā fī al-Qur'ān" (a study of the Qur'ān), in order to determine whether Bint al-Shāṭi' is consistent in applying her method in specific situations. Her use of the cross-referential method in her interpretation of Q. 103 (Sūrat al-'Aṣr) and her treatment of the case of hurrīyat al-'aqīda (freedom of belief) will be analyzed in this chapter. Another topic to be examined concerns her idea of the irtibal (interconnection) between verses and sūras. Chapter three explores her treatment of the asbāb al-nuzūl, the study of which Bint al-Shāṭi' calls $m\bar{a}$ hawl al-Qur'ān (what surrounds the Qur'ān). Again, the main purpose here is to see Bint al-Shāṭi''s theory and application at work. The thesis will end with a conclusion related to the above discussion.

Esposito (New York; Oxford: Oxford University Press, 1995), 1: 4-5; Miriam Cooke, "Arab Women Writers," in Modern Arabic Literature, edited by M. M. Badawi (Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 1992), 449; Abāza al-Sabī'i, "Bint al-Shāṭi'," in Contemporary Arab Writers: Biographies and Autobiographies, edited by Robert B. Campbell (Beirut: In Kommission bei Franz Steiner Verlag Stuttgart, 1996), 1: 362-3; and Paul Starkey, "'Ā'isha 'Abd al-Raḥmān," in Encyclopedia of Arabic Literature, ed. Julie Scott Meisami and Paul Starkey (London and New York: Routledge, 1998), 1: 18.

The method of analysis that will be used in this thesis is, first of all, the phenomenological approach, meaning that I will objectively explore what Bint al-Shāṭi' says about the interpretations and methods of previous exegetes, as well as about her own method and its application. Comparative analysis is also employed, for in order to understand comprehensively her positions on the subjects under discussion, it will be necessary to compare them with those of other Qur'ān exegetes, and in some places, with biblical hermeneutics. This analysis is important in helping us understand where Bint al-Shāṭi' should be placed in the history of Qur'ān exegesis, and of scriptural interpretation in general. Critical analysis is also a major feature of this thesis. This method will deal with the problem of consistency between her theory and its application. To avoid passing judgement, the thesis uses internal criticism.

In analyzing the subject matter under discussion, the author employs both primary and secondary sources. The primary sources, for the most part available only in Arabic, mostly concern Qur'anic studies. Bint al-Shāṭi''s works in this field naturally represent the most important sources of this thesis. Some original works on biblical hermeneutics are also used in comparative analyses. The secondary sources that are written in English, French and German dealing with Islamic studies in general, Qur'an exegesis, biblical hermeneutics and other topics, have also been drawn upon in the writing of this study.

Chapter One

Bint al-Shāṭi"s Criticism of Previous Exegetical Tradition in Islam

Bint al-Shāṭi' defines tafsir as an attempt to understand the Qur'ān that consists in explaining and clarifying the text by using interpretive as opposed to synonymous language. She says that it is a discipline that has been practiced by Muslim scholars from a very early period, and acknowledges that such exegetes as al-Farrā' (d. 207/822), al-Ṭabarī (d. 310/923), al-Zamakhsharī (d. 538/1144), al-Rāzī (d. 606/1210), Abū Ḥayyān (d. 754/1344) and Muḥammad 'Abduh (d. 1905), made invaluable contributions to this field. However, their interpretations, according to her, are colored to a great extent by tendentious projections, sometimes based on sectarian and extra-Qur'ānic

¹⁶Bint al-Shāṭi', al-Tafsir al-Bayāni li al-Qur'ān al-Karīm (Cairo: Dār al-Ma'ārif, 1990), 2: 9.

¹⁷See Abū Zakarīyā Yaḥyā ibn Ziyād al-Farrā', Ma'ānī al-Qur'ān, ed. Muḥammad 'Alī al-Najjār (Cairo: al-Dār al-Miṣrīya li al-Ta'līf wa al-Tarjama, n.d.).

¹⁸See Muḥammad ibn Jarīr al-Ṭabarī, Jāmi' al-Bayān fī Tafsīr al-Qur'ān (Beirut: Dār al-Ma'rifa, 1986-7).

¹⁹See Maḥmūd ibn 'Umar al-Zamakhsharī, al-Kashshaf 'an Ḥaqa'iq al-Tanzil wa 'Uyūn al-Aqāwil fī Wujūh al-Ta'wil (Beirut: Dār al-Kitāb al-'Arabī, n.d).

²⁰See Fakhr al-Din al- Rāzi Muḥammad ibn 'Umar, al-Tafsir al-Kabir (Beirut: Dār Iḥyā' al-Turāth al-'Arabi, n.d.).

²¹See Muḥammad Ibn Yūsuf Abū Ḥayyān, al-Tafsir al-Kabir al-Musamma bi al-Baḥr al-Muḥiţ (Riyāḍ: Maktabat wa Maṭābi' al-Naṣr al-Ḥadītha, n.d.).

²²See Muḥammad 'Abduh, Tafsir Juz' 'Amma (Cairo: Maṭābi' al-Sha'b, n.d.).

materials, and often ignore the miraculous nature (i'jāz) of the Qur'ān.²³ Besides spreading sectarian doctrines,²⁴ bad enough in itself, this results in Muslims being exposed to much more than the Qur'ānic message and the subtle meanings (asrār) of its words, a problem which is, in her eyes, the most significant in the exegetical field. Accordingly, Bint al-Shāṭi' often criticizes such conjectures on the part of previous interpreters.

I. On Tendentious Interpretations

The tendentious interpretations which draw Bint al-Shāṭi''s criticism are the Isrā'ilīyāt-oriented, theological, mystical, philosophical, and so-called "scientific" hermeneutical approaches.

The Isra iliyat, which consist of stories derived from the Bible (Tawrah and Injil), particularly in regard to the prophets, the ancient Israelites (Banu Isra il), and Jewish folklore, 25 are found in many works of Islamic literature, including those of an exegetical variety. Abbott remarks in her Studies in Arabic Literary Papyri that during the first century of Islam Muslims read and transmitted ²³See Bint al-Shāṭi', Al-Qur'an wa al-Tafsir al-'Aṣri (Cairo: Dar al-Ma'arif, 1970), 24-32; and idem, al-Tafsir al-Bayani, 2: 8.

²⁴See, e.g., Ismail K. Poonawala, "Muḥammad 'Izzat Darwaza's Principles of Modern Exegesis: A Contribution toward Quranic Hermeneutics," in Approaches to the Qur'an, ed. G. R. Hawting and Abdul-Kader A. Shareef (London and New York: Routledge, 1993), 235.

²⁵G. Vajda, "Isrā'iliyyāt," in The Encyclopaedia of Islam, ed. E. van Donzel, B. Lewis and Ch. Pellat (Leiden: E. J. Brill, 1978), 4: 211. See also Yūsuf 'Abd al-Raḥmān in his Muqaddimat Tafsir Ibn Kathir, published together with Ismā'il Ibn Kathir, Tafsir al-Qur'an al-'Azīm (Beirut: Dār al-Ma'rifa, 1987), 1: 18.

Biblical materials from the Ahl al-Kitāb ("the People of the Book") who had converted to Islam, such as Ka'b al-Aḥbār (d. 32-4/652-4)²⁶ and Wahb ibn Munabbih (d. 110-6/728-34).²⁷ Many Companions, such as Salmān al-Fārisī (d. 32-4/652-4),²⁸ Zayd ibn Thābit (d. 45-55/665-74)²⁹ (the editor-in-chief of the 'Uthmānic edition of the Qur'ān), and Ibn 'Abbās (d. 68-70/687-9)³⁰ (the so-called father of Qur'ān interpretation) are reported to have had considerable knowledge of the Isra'īlīyāt, and to have passed this knowledge on to others.³¹

Although, since about the middle of the second century of Islam, a general prohibition against reporting the Isra'īlīyāt seems to have been urged by some Successors (tābi'un), such as al-A'mash (d. 148/765) and Sufyān al-Thawrī (d. 161/778),³² the practice still continued. It is even recorded that, after the ²⁶See Muḥammad ibn Sa'd, al-Tabaqāt al-Kubrā (Beirut: Dār Ṣādir, 1958), 7: 445; and Muḥammad ibn Aḥmad al-Dhahabī, Siyar A'lām al-Nubalā', ed. Ḥusayn al-Asad (Beirut: Mu'assasat al-Risāla, 1986), 3: 489-94. See also Nabia Abbott, Studies in Arabic Literary Papyri (Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1967), 2: 8.

²⁷See al-Dhahabī, Siyar A'lam al-Nubala', 4: 544-57, especially 445, and 447. See also Nabia Abbott, Studies, 2: 8.

²⁸Ibn Sa'd reported that Salmān al-Fārisī, who converted to Islam just after the Prophet arrived in Medina, used to be a slave of a Jewish person of Banū Qurayṣa. Al-Fārisī read many books of revelation to seek religion. See Jamāl al-Dīn Abū al-Ḥajjāj Yūsuf al-Mizzī, Tahdhib al-Kamāl fī Asmā' al-Rijāl, ed. Bashshār 'Awwād Ma'rūf (Beirut: Mu'assasat al-Risāla, 1992), 11: 247.

²⁹See Ibn Sa'd, al-Ṭabaqat al-Kubra, 2: 358; and al-Mizzi, Tahdhib al-Kamal, 10: 28.

³⁰See Ibn Sa'd, al-Ṭabaqat al-Kubra, 2: 365; and al-Mizzi, Tahdhib al-Kamal, 15: 154.

³¹Nabia Abbott, Studies, 2: 8-9.

time of the Successors, Isra îlīyat reports were even more popular than ever, reflecting a genuine love for these Judeo-Christian tales.³³ Al-Ṭabarī, for instance, collects in his Jāmi' al-Bayān a great number of Isra īlīyat reports on the basis of which, in part, previous generations had interpreted the Qur'ānic verses which speak of the biblical prophets and their societies.³⁴ This approach was followed by others, such as al-Khāzin (d. 741/1340),³⁵ and al-Tha'ālibī (d. 873-4/1468-9).³⁶ The transmission of such reports was maintained throughout the classical period, because, apart from the fact that the Prophet did not strictly prohibit the practice,³⁷ the Arab people, who were without a written tradition of their own, ³²See Aḥmad ibn 'Alī ibn Ḥajar al-'Asqalānī, Fatḥ al-Bārī bi Sharḥ Ṣaḥīḥ al-Bukhārī, ed. 'Abd al-'Azīz ibn 'Abd Allāh ibn Bāz (Beirut: Dār al-Ma'rifa, n.d.), 13: 334. Nabia Abbott, Studies, 2: 10.

³³Al-Dhahabi, al-Tafsir wa al-Mufassirun, 1: 176.

³⁴Peter G. Riddle, "The Transmission of Narrative-Based Exegesis in Islam: Al-Baghdādī's Use of Stories in his Commentary on the Qur'ān and a Malay Descendent," in Islam: Essays on Scripture, Thought & Society, ed. Peter G. Riddle and Tony Street (Leiden: E. J. Brill, 1997), 59.

³⁵See 'Alī ibn Muḥammad al-Khāzin, Lubāb al-Ta'wil fī Ma'āni al-Tanzil (Cairo: Maṭba'at al-Istiqāma, 1955).

³⁶See 'Abd al-Raḥmān ibn Muḥammad al-Tha'ālibī, al-Jawāhir al-Ḥisān fī Tafsir al-Qur'ān, ed. 'Ammār al-Ṭālibī (Algiers: al-Mu'assasa al-Waṭanīya li al-Kitāb, 1985). The editor remarks in his introduction to this work that in some places the author criticizes some of the Isrā'īlīyāt he quotes. Cf. Riddle, "The Transmission of Narrative-Based Exegesis in Islam," 61-9.

³⁷There are three different hadiths governing the attitudes towards Isra'ilīyāt. The first is one from which it may be inferred that transmitting Isra'ilīyāt is permitted. It is reported on the authority of Abū Hurayra that the Prophet said: "Report from Jewish people; there is no objection." The second justifies the contention that the Prophet neither ordered nor prohibited the reporting of Isra'ilīyāt. He said: "Don't deem the people of the Book credible, and don't accuse them of lying, but say: 'We believe in Allāh and what He revealed to us." The last one is a hadīth that prohibits the practice, in understandably turned to those with such a tradition, such as the "People of the Book." Another reason is that most of the Qur'anic verses which speak of the stories of previous prophets and societies discuss them only in general terms. This left Muslims, who needed more detailed information, with no other choice but to refer to the stories of "the People of the Book." Moreover, according to Bint al-Shāṭi', the practice also resulted from the tendentious attempt by Jews who had converted to Islam to insert Judaic ideas into the Muslim understanding of the Qur'an.³⁹

Recognizing the fact that the Isra'īlīyāt have colored much exegetical literature, Ibn Taymīya (d. 725/1328), in his Muqaddima fī Uṣul al-Tafsīr, and his disciple Ibn Kathīr (d. 775/1373), in the introduction to his Tafsīr al-Qur'ān al-'Azīm, explain how Muslims should approach such reports. After dividing the types of Isra'īlīyāt into three, i.e., (1) those that are proven by Islamic teachings which the Prophet is quoted as having said: "Don't ask the 'People of the Book' about anything." Al-Qasṭallānī maintains in his Irshād al-Sārī that the hadīth is only concerned with the prohibition against asking them about the sharī a. See Aḥmad ibn Muḥammad al-Qasṭallānī, Irshād al-Sārī li Sharḥ Ṣaḥiḥ al-Bukhārī (Beirut: Dār al-Fikr, 1990), 15: 368-70; Aḥmad ibn 'Alī ibn Ḥajar al-'Asqalānī, Fatḥ al-Bārī bi Sharḥ Ṣaḥiḥ, ed. 'Abd al-'Azīz ibn 'Abd Allāh ibn Bāz (Beirut: Dār al-Ma'rifa, n.d.), 13: 333-5; and Muḥammad Shams al-Ḥaqq al-'Azīm Ābādī, 'Awn al-Ma'būd fī Sharḥ Sunan Abī Dāwūd, ed. 'Abd al-Raḥmān Muḥammad 'Uthmān (Beirut: Dār al-Fikr, 1979), 10: 96-7; and M. J. Kister, "Haddithū 'an banī isra ila wa-lā ḥaraja: A Study of an Early Tradition," Israel Oriental Studies 2 (1972), 215-39.

³⁸See 'Abd al-Raḥmān ibn Khaldūn, Muqaddimat Ibn Khaldūn, ed. 'Alī 'Abd al-Wāḥid Wāfī (Cairo: Lajnat al-Bayān al-'Arabī, 1958), 1: 490-1. See also al-Dhahabī, al-Tafsir wa al-Mufassirūn, 1: 177-8.

³⁹Bint al-Shāṭi', al-Tafsir al-Bayāni, 1: 8, idem, al-Qur'ān wa al-Tafsir, 31; and idem, al-Isrā'ilīyāt fī al-Ghazw al-Fikri (Cairo: Ma'had al-Buḥūth wa al-Dirāsāt al-'Arabīya, 1975), 87-145.

[e.g. the Qur'an], (2) those that contradict these teachings, and (3) those that are left unexplained (maskutun 'anhu), they remark that one should not employ them due to the fact that most of the Isra iliyat tales contradict one another, and that besides there is no religious advantage to knowing detailed Isra iliyat reports. However, this does not seem to constitute a very severe prohibition against Isra iliyat-based interpretation.

Bint al-Shāṭi', like many other modern scholars,⁴¹ criticizes this exegetical tradition.⁴² In her al-Qur'ān wa al-Tafsir al-'Aṣri, she remarks that it is not suitable to interpret the Qur'ān on the basis of Isrā'ilīyāt. She, therefore, reproaches Muṣṭafā Maḥmūd for interpreting Q. 44 (S. al-Dukhān): 10-11, and Q. 14 (S. Ibrāhīm): 48, verses which speak of the appearance of the Day of Resurrection, by referring to Yuḥannā's apocalyptic vision in which he saw the indications of that event,⁴³ and for identifying Gog and Magog (Ya'jūj̄ wa Ma'jūj̄), referred to in Q.

⁴⁰See Ismā'il ibn Kathīr, Tafsīr al-Qur'an al-'Azīm (Beirut: Dār al-Ma'rifa, 1987), 1: 5.

Among them are Muḥammad 'Abduh, Rashīd Riḍā, and Abū Rayya. See J. M. S. Baljon, Modern Muslim Koran Interpretation (Leiden: E. J. Brill, 1961), 16; Jansen, The Interpretation of the Koran, 27; G. H. A. Juynboll, The Authenticity of the Tradition Literature: Discussions in Modern Egypt (Leiden: E. J. Brill, 1969), 121-38; Roland Meynet, Louis Pouzet, Nā'ila Fārūqī, and Ahyaf Sinnū, Ṭarīq al-Taḥlīl al-Balāghī wa al-Tafsīr: Taḥlīlāt Nuṣuṣ min al-Kitāb al-Muqaddas wa min al-Ḥadīth al-Nabawī (Beirut: Dār al-Mashriq, 1993), 39.

⁴²See Boullata, "Modern Qur'ān Exegesis," 105; Muhammad 'Ata al Sid, "The Hermeneutical Problem," 342; and Yudian Wahyudi, "Ali Shariati and Bint al-Shāṭi' on Free Will: A Comparison," Journal of Islamic Studies 9, 1 (1998), 43.

18 (S. al-Kahf): 94, with Field Marshal Montgomery and Mao Tse Tung. Her avoidance of Isra iliyat is quite marked in several passages of her own al-Tafsir al-Bayani. When interpreting Q. 89 (S. al-Fajr): 6-12, for example, which speaks of the pre-Islamic Arab tribes of 'Ad and Thamud, to which belonged the Prophets Hud and Ṣāliḥ respectively, she quotes several of the opinions of previous interpreters, namely al-Ṭabari, al-Zamakhshari, Abū Ḥayyān, al-Rāzi and Muḥammad 'Abduh. All of these furnish detailed controversial information about the tribes, leading her to remark:

Most of what they said about the [physical] tallness, names, numbers and building materials [of 'Ad and Thamūd] are from the Isra'īlīyaī that are crammed into the book of Islam [the Qur'ān] either in terms of its text or its context. In order to purify it of involvement with the Isra'īlīyaī, we appeal to the Qur'ān against those opinions, because they become more numerous and contradict one another. If we wish more explanation of the verses of Surat al-Fajr then we rather seek it from the Qur'ān.⁵²

⁴³See Muṣṭafā Maḥmūd, al-Qur'an: Muḥawala li Fahm 'Aṣrī (Beirut: Dār al-'Awda, 1979), 181-6, and 193-4; Bint al-Shāṭi', al-Qur'an wa al-Tafsīr, 61, and 63; and idem, al-Isra'iliyat, 168.

⁴⁴See Bint al-Shāṭi', al-Qur'an wa al-Tafsir, 62.

 $^{^{45}}$ See e.g., Bint al-Shāṭi', al-Tafsir al-Bayāni, 1: 12; and 2: 8. See also her al-Isra'iliyat, 170-1.

⁴⁶See al-Ṭabarī, Jāmi' al-Bayān, 30: 111-4.

⁴⁷See al-Zamakhshari, al-Kashshaf, 4: 747-8.

⁴⁸See Abū Ḥayyān, al-Baḥr al-Muḥiṭ, 8: 469-70.

⁴⁹See al-Rāzī, al-Tafsir al-Kabīr, 30: 396.

⁵⁰See 'Abduh, Tafsir Juz' 'Amma, 61.

⁵¹ See Bint al-Shāṭi', al-Tafsir al-Bayani, 2: 138-41.

Afterwards, listing all Qur'anic verses dealing with the stories of 'Ad and Thamud, which, according to Khalaf Allah, are meant as a warning to those who disbelieve in God's intended punishment of disbelief,⁵³ Bint al-Shāṭi' elaborates that the mention of the 'Ad, which was Hūd's tribe, always occurs in the Qur'an as an exemplary warning, stressing their disbelief in their Prophet, their tyranny in the world, and the divine punishment they received.⁵⁴

From the above, one can say that the Isra'iliyat accounts, whose employment by both classical and modern interpreters she criticizes severely, are nonetheless given a broader, if not indeed inaccurate, definition by Bint al-Shāṭi'. It seems that the term Isra'iliyat, which had been used by many scholars only in reference to Judeo-Christian narratives, was regarded by her as designating every prophet's tale that is not mentioned in detail in the Qur'ān. The detailed extra-Qur'ānic information about the 'Ād and Thamūd is not to be found in the Bible (including the Torah), as al-Ṭabarī points out in his Tārīkh,55 but in pre-Islamic (Jāhilī) folk literature, as Stetkevych proves in his Muḥammad and the ⁵²Bint al-Shāṭi', al-Tafsir al-Bayāni, 2: 141.

⁵³See Muḥammad Aḥmad Khalaf Allāh, al-Fann al-Qaṣasi fi al-Qur'an al-Karim (Cairo: Maktabat al-Nahḍa al-Miṣrīya, 1950-1), 293.

⁵⁴See Bint al-Shāṭi', al-Tafsir al-Bayāni, 2: 141-2.

⁵⁵See Muḥammad Ibn Jarīr al-Ṭabarī, Tārīkh al-Rusul wa al-Muluk, ed. M. J. de Goeje, et al. (Leiden: E. J. Brill, 1879-1901), 1: 252-3. See also R. Arnaldez, Le Coran: Guide de Lecture (Paris: Desclée, 1983), 105-6; and Tarif Khalidi, Arabic Historical Thought in the Classical Period (Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 1994), 77.

Golden Bough. 56 Similarly, the interpretation of Gog and Magog as Field Marshal Montgomery and Mao Tse Tung are characterized by Bint al-Shāṭi' as Isrā'īlīyāt, but without any basis in fact.

Wahyudi detects in Bint al-Shāṭi''s rejection of the Isrā'ilīyāt a manifestation of her resentment of Zionist propaganda in the Muslim world.⁵⁷ Given the political context of her times, his opinion could be right. However, phenomenologically speaking, it is sufficient to say that her refusal of the Isrā'ilīyāt is entirely in keeping with her concern for literary analysis. Bint al-Shāṭi' explicitly states that the inclusion of Isrā'ilīyāt as a source for the interpretation of the Qur'ān can lead interpreters to discuss things irrelevant to its text. Scientific method, she argues, rejects interpretation of a text on the basis of material that is not conveyed in its words and context.⁵⁸

The second kind of tendentious interpretation to which Bin al-Shāti''s criticism is addressed concerns the introduction of theological debate into attempts at understanding the Qur'ān. The theological sects (madhhabs) which she targets in particular include the Qadarīya (believers in free-will), whose ideas were later adopted by the Mu'tazila, and the Jabrīya (determinists) who differed considerably in terms of their ideas. It was inevitable that scholars should become propagandists for the sectarian principles to which they adhered. They, of course, cited either rational or scriptural arguments, or both, in support of their beliefs.⁵⁹ Inevitably, the Qur'ān itself was appealed to in order to strengthen their position. For example, al-Zamakhsharī, a Mu'tazilī interpreter, cites Q. 10 (S. Yūnus): 108,60 and Q. 53 (S. al-Najm): 39-4261 (among others) in support of the Mu'tazilī principle of human free will.62 However, those Qur'ānic verses, such as Q. 11 (S. Hūd): 10763 and Q. 28 (S. al-Qaṣaṣ): 56,64 whose literal meanings seem clearly to contradict this principle are accordingly declared mutashābihāt (ambiguous verses) by al-Zamakhsharī in order that they may be ⁵⁹See Richard C. Martin, Islamic Studies: A History of Religions Approach (Upper Saddle River: Prentice Hall, 1996), 109.

⁵⁶See Jaroslav Stetkevych, Muḥammad and the Golden Bough (Bloomington and Indianapolis: Indiana University Press, 1996), 50-56.

⁵⁷ Wahyudi, "Ali Shariati and Bint al-Shāṭi'," 43.

⁵⁸See Bint al-Shāṭi', al-Isrā'ilīyāt, 92; and idem al-Qur'ān wa al-Tafsīr, 30.

⁶⁰The verse reads: "Say: O mankind! Now hath the Truth from Your Lord come unto You. So whoever is guided, is guided only for (the good of) his soul, and whoever erreth erreth only against it. And I am not a warder over you." The translation of this verse and those of other verses in this thesis are taken from Muhammed Marmaduke Pickthall's The Meaning of the Glorious Koran (Delhi: World Islamic Publications, 1981).

⁶¹The verses read: "And that man hath only that for which he maketh effort. And that his effort will be seen. And afterward he will be repaid for it with fullest payment, And that thy Lord is the goal."

⁶²Al-Zamakhshari, Al-Kashshāf, 2: 375, 430. Commenting on Q. 10: 108, al-Zamakhshari says: "Those who choose the right guidance (al-hudā) and follow the truth (al-ḥaqq) will not be given reward through their choice other than for their own selves; and those who prefer the wrong path (al-ḍalāl) will harm no other than themselves." See also Bint al-Shāṭi', al-Shakhṣiya al-Islāmiya (Beirut: University of Beirut, 1972), 48; and Helmut Gätje, The Qur'ān and its Exegesis: Selected Texts with Classical and Modern Muslim Interpretation, trans. Alford T. Welch (London and Henley: Routledge & Kegan Paul, 1971), 36.

⁶³The verse reads: "... Lo! thy Lord is Doer of what he will."

⁶⁴The verse reads: "Lo! thou (O Muhammad) guidest not whom thou loveth, but Allah guideth whom he will. And He is best aware of those who walk aright."

reinterpreted to fit his theories.⁶⁵ Those who held the deterministic view, on the other hand, based their position on the verses that the Mu'tazilis regarded as mutashābihāt, and ignored the other problematic verses.⁶⁶

In this instance, Bint al-Shāṭi' rejects both positions as well as the hermeneutical methods employed to derive them. She says:

It is impossible to accept some verses and turn away from others, since the whole Qur'ān is from God. The Q. 4 (S. al-Nisā'): 82 says: "Will they not then ponder on the Qur'ān? If it had been from other than God they would have found therein much incongruity."⁶⁷

⁶⁵ Al-Zamakhshari, al-Kashshaf, 3: 422. Q. 28: 56 which literally refers to the idea of determinism, is interpreted in such a way that it accords with the idea of free-will. He says: "You (Muhammad) will not be able to convert into Islam anyone from your tribe or others, whom you wish to do so, because you are a human being; you do not know whether their hearts are sealed (matbul 'ala qalbihi) or not. But, God converts to Islam anybody He likes, for He knows which one is matbu 'ala qalbihi. And in this case the divine luff ("kindness") benefits him. God's luff goes together with him in order to direct him to Islam." This ta'wil constitutes an hermeneutical application of the interpretive theory of mutashabih held by the previous Mu'tazilis, like 'Abd al-Jabbar (d. 415/1024). The latter points out in his al-Mughni that those verses which literally contradict the rational notion of tawhid (the oneness of God) and 'adl (divine justice), and which are, therefore, called mutashabihat (ambiguous verses), have to be interpreted through rational interpretation in the light of those muhkamāt (clear verses) which are literally in consonance with the notion. See al-Qadi 'Abd al-Jabbar ibn Ahmad al-Hamadhāni, Mutashābih al-Qur'an, ed. 'Adnān Muḥammad Zarzūr (Cairo: Dār al-Turāth, n.d.), 1: 1-39; Naṣr Ḥāmid Abū Zayd, al-Ittijāh al-'Aqli fi al-Tafsir: Dirāsa fi Qadiyat al-Majāz fī al-Qur'ān 'ind al-Mu'tazila (Beirut: Dār al-Tanwīr, 1982), 180-239; and William Thomson, "Free Will and Predestination in Early Islam: A Critique and Appreciation," the Muslim World 40 (1950), 207-216. See also Régis Blachère, Introduction au Coran (Paris: Éditions Besson & Chantemerle, 1959), 216-7. In this work, Blachère maintains that the Mu'tazili exegeses were very much influenced by hellenistic ideas.

⁶⁶ See 'Alī ibn Ismā'īl al-Ash'arī, Kitāb Maqālāt al-Islāmīyīn wa Ikhtilāf al-Muṣallīn, ed. Hellmut Ritter (Istanbul: Maṭba'at al-Dawla, 1930), 2: 540-1; and Maymūn ibn Muḥammad al-Nasafī, Tabṣirat al-Adilla fī Uṣul al-Din 'Alā Ṭariqat al-Imām Abī Manṣur al-Maturidī, ed. Claude Salamé (Limassol-Chyprus: al-Jaffān & al-Jābī Imprimeurs-Editeurs, 1993), 2: 595. In this passage, al-Nasafī (d. 508/1114) criticizes both the Mu'tazila and the Jabrīya for ignoring the verses which contradict their ideas.

By means of inductive method (al-manhaj al-istiqra i),68 on the basis of which she tries to arrive at the purely Qur'ānic perspective on the subject, Bint al-Shāṭi' comes to the conclusion that: (1) human will differs from God's will in that the former is acquired (kasbiya), preceded by intention, thinking and desire, and characterized by strength and weakness, whereas the latter is not;69 (2) unlike human will, divine will is an effective (nafidh) and inescapable (mubram) fate;70 (3) there is no contradiction between the human will and the divine one, meaning that through acquired will human beings choose what they will and act on that choice, while the divine will paves the way for them to act on their choices;71 and (4) the divine will is neither concerned with the guidance of those who choose to ⁶⁷Bint al-Shāṭi', al-Shakhṣiya, 49; and idem, al-Qur'ān wa Qaḍāyā al-Insān (Beirut: Dār al-'Ilm li al-Malāyīn, 1982), 147.

⁶⁸She searches for the meanings of the verses: Q. 36 (S. Yā Sin): 40, 47, 82; Q. 17 (S. al-Isrā'): 18-19, 94-95; Q. 2 (Al 'Imrān): 145; Q. 13 (S. al-Ra'd): 11, Q. 8 (S. al-Anfāl): 53; Q. 11 (S. Huā): 101; Q. 92 (S. al-Layl): 12-13; Q. 6 (S. al-An'ām): 35, 148; Q. 41 (S. Fuṣṣilat): 14; Q. 43 (S. al-Zukhruf): 20, 60; Q. 73 (S. al-Muzzammil): 19; Q. 74 (S. al-Muddaththir): 32-37, 53-55; Q. 39 (S. al-Zumar): 14-15; Q. 16 (S. al-Naḥl): 9; Q. 32 (S. al-Sajda): 13; Q. 5 (al-Mā'ida): 48; Q. 25 (S. al-Furqān): 45; Q. 42 (S. al-Shūrā): 32-33; and Q. 18 (S. al-Kahf): 23-24. See also Bint al-Shāṭi', al-Shakhsīya, 49-55.

 $^{^{69}}$ See Q. 3 (S. $A\bar{l}$ 'Imrān): 159. See also Bint al-Shāṭi', al-Shakhṣiya, 47; and idem, al-Qur'ān wa Qaḍāyā, 133.

⁷⁰See Q. 13 (S. al-Ra'd): 11, Q. 16 (S. al-Naḥl): 40, and Q. 36 (S. Yā Sīn): 82. See also Bint al-Shāṭi', al-Shakhṣiya, 49; and idem, al-Qur'ān wa Qaḍāyā, 137.

⁷¹See Q. 3 (S. Al̄ 'Imran̄): 145, Q. 4 (S. al-Nisa ̄): 134, Q. 11 (S. Hud̄): 15, 101, Q. 17 (S. al-Isra ̄): 18, Q. 33 (S. al-Aḥzab̄): 28-9, Q. 42 (S. al-Shur̄a): 20, and Q. 92 (S. al-Layl̄): 5-10. See Bint al-Shaṭi ', al-Shakhṣiya, 49-50; idem, al-Qur'an wa Qaḍaya, 135-6.

go astray from religious teachings, nor with the breaking of the sunnat Allah (God's Law) in His creatures.⁷²

According to Bint al-Shāṭi', the weakness of the disputants lies in their methodology in interpreting the Qur'ān, which is based on their personal projections and bound up with sectarian tendencies.⁷³ This conclusion is echoed by many scholars, such as Naṣr Ḥāmid Abū Zayd and Richard C. Martin, who have studied the history of the emergence of the classical theological sects.⁷⁴

A very tendentious problem in the field of tafsir is also to be found, according to Bint al-Shāṭi', in al-tafsir al-ishāri (symbolic interpretation), which is manifested in mystical (suff) and philosophical (falsafī) interpretations. The symbolic interpretation (al-tafsir al-ishārī), which is a hermeneutical exercise on which interpreters rely in trying to understand the concealed indications (ishārāt khafīyā) of Qur'ānic expressions,75 has been the subject of much debate. Those who admit such interpretation, which does not condradict, even though it ⁷²See Q. 5 (S. al-Mā'ida): 48, Q. 6 (S. al-An'ām): 148, Q. 10 (S. Yūnus): 99, Q. 16 (S. al-Naḥl): 9, Q. 17 (S. al-Isrā'): 94-5, Q. 25 (S. al-Furqān): 45, Q. 32 (S. al-Sajda): 13, Q. 41 (S. Fuṣṣilat): 14, Q. 42 (S. al-Shūrā): 32-3, Q. 43 (S. al-Zukhruf): 20, 60 Q. 36 (S. Yā Sīn): 40, 47. See also Bint al-Shāṭi', al-Shakhṣīya, 53-4; and idem, al-Qur'ān wa Qaḍāyā, 143-6.

⁷³See Bint al-Shāṭi', al-Qur'an wa al-Tafsir, 24-25. In this case, Bint al-Shāṭi' corresponds to Daud Rahbar. See Rudi Paret, "Der Koran und Die Prādestination [Besprechung von: Daud Rahbar, God of Justice]," in Der Koran, ed. Rudi Paret (Darmstadt: Wissenschaftliche Buchgesellschaft, 1975), 161.

⁷⁴See Abū Zayd, al-Ittijāh al-'Aqli fi al-Tafsir, 42; and Martin, Islamic Studies, 109.

⁷⁵Khālid 'Abd al-Raḥmān al-'Akk, Uṣul al-Tafsir wa Qawa' iduh (Beirut: Dār al-Nafā'is, 1986), 205. See also Pierre Lory, Les Commentaires ésotériques du Coran d'après 'Abd ar-Razzâq al-Qâshânî (Paris: Les Deux Océans, 1980), 12.

avoids, the literal meaning of the Qur'an, offer various religio-dogmatic, rational and historical arguments in justification of their position. Q. 6 (S. al-An'am): 38 and Q. 16 (S. al-Nahl): 89, according to al-Ghazāli, al-Suyūṭi, and others, indicate that the Qur'an provides the foundations of all knowledge, and that it can be interpreted in many ways by detecting the symbols (rumuz) and indications (dalalat) that are contained within it.76 Similarly, al-Jahiz says: "Indication (ishara) and word are associated with each other. The indication of a word is the best tool [of interpretation]; and the best interpreter is one who understands the isharat. [That is because] there are so many isharat that probably exist in words, and do not need to be written [or spoken]."77 Moreover, Muhammad Husayn al-Tabătaba'i, a modern Shi'i commentator, argues that human intellect and knowledge vary from one person to another, so that it is impossible to convey what is understood by those who have acquired a high degree of knowledge to those who have a lower intellectual capacity.78 In the history of Qur'anic hermeneutics, ishāri interpretation has been relied upon since early Islam. The ⁷⁶See Abū Ḥāmid Muḥammad ibn Muḥammad al-Ghazālī, Jawāhir al-Qur'ān (Beirut: Dār al-Kutub al-'Ilmīya, 1988), 31-2; and Jalāl al-Dīn 'Abd al-Raḥmān al-Suyūṭi, al-Itqān fī 'Uluīm al-Qur'ān (Cairo: Dār al-Turāth, n.d.), 4: 24. See also P. Lory, Les Commentaires, 17.

⁷⁷'Amr ibn Baḥr al-Jāḥiz, al-Bayān wa al-Tabyīn, ed. 'Abd al-Salām Muḥammad Hārūn (Cairo: Maṭba'at Lajnat al-Ta'līf wa al-Tarjama wa al-Nashr, 1948), 1: 78.

⁷⁸See Muḥammad Ḥusayn al-Ṭabāṭabā'ī, al-Qur'ān fī al-Islām, trans. Aḥmad al-Ḥusaynī (Teheran: Markaz I'lām al-Dhikrā, 1983), 39-46.

Prophet's Companion Ibn 'Abbas, for example, is reported to have regarded Q. 110 (S. al-Naṣr) as symbolizing the forthcoming death of the Prophet.⁷⁹

This ishāri interpretation was then developed by exegetes who were experts in mystical knowledge and experience, as well as in philosophical thought. This approach, while Islamized in its later development, initially derived mostly from extra-Qur'ānic sources. One example of mystical symbolic exegesis is that of al-Ghazālī (d. 505/1111). Contending that every single word has "crust" (qishr) and "core" (lubāb) meanings,80 al-Ghazālī said that the word al-qalam (lit. pen) in Q. 96 (S. al-'Alaq): 4, for example, designates not only a pen, but also as a spiritual matter (ruḥānī), which represents the essence of the Qur'ānic word.81 Similarly, Ibn al-'Arabī (d. 638/1240) is alleged to have interpreted Q. 30 (S. al-Rūm): 1-5,82 verses which literally refer to the victory of ⁷⁹Muḥammad ibn Ismā'īl al-Bukhārī, Ṣaḥiḥ al-Bukhārī, published together with al-Qaṣṭallānī's Irshād al-Sārī, 11: 277.

⁸⁰In his Jawahir al-Qur'an Al-Ghazālī divides the Qur'ānic sciences into two. One set is called 'ulūm al-ṣadaf wa al-qishr ("crust" sciences). This includes the science of Arabic language ('ilm al-lugha), the science of syntax ('ilm al-naḥw), the science of Qur'ānic readings ('ilm al-Qirā'āt), the science of makhārij al-ḥuruf, and literal interpretation (al-tafsīr al-ṣāhir). The other is called 'ulūm al-lubāb ("core" sciences). This consists of the sciences of Qur'ānic stories, Islamic theology (al-kalām), Islamic jurisprudence (al-fiqh/uṣūl al-fiqh) and Islamic mysticism (al-taṣawwuf). See al-Ghazālī, Jawāhir al-Qur'ān, 22-30.

⁸¹Al-Ghazālī, Jawāhir al-Qur'ān, 29-30; and Naṣr Ḥāmid Abū Zayd, Mafhuīn al-Naṣṣ: Dirāsa fī 'Uluīn al-Qur'ān (Cairo: al-Hay'a al-Miṣrīya al-'Āmma li al-Kitāb, 1990), 307-8.

⁸²The verses say: "Alif. Lām. Mīm. The Romans have been defeated in the nearer land, and they, after defeat will be victorious within ten [a few] years--Allah's is the command in the former case and in the latter--and in that day believers will rejoice. In Allah's help [is] victory. He helpeth to victory whom He will. He is the Mighty, the Merciful."

the Romans over the Persians, as a symbol of the triumph of spiritual (al-ruḥāniya) over worldly things.⁸³ Muslim philosophers, like Ibn Sīnā and Mullā Ṣadrā, interpreted the Qur'ān from a philosophical perspective. Their works al-Ishārāt and Asrār al-Ayāt, respectively, constitute philosophical commentaries on the Qur'ān.⁸⁴ In these hermeneutical works, they brought a great many extra-Qur'ānic ideas into their interpretation.

In more recent times, when Muslims began to acquire a knowledge of modern sciences from the West, further extra-Qur'anic interpretation based on these sciences was offered by some scholars. Some, such as Tantawi Jawhari, Hanafi Ahmad, and Mustafa Mahmud, supported this kind of interpretation.

⁸³See Muḥyi al-Din ibn 'Arabi, Tafsir al-Qur'ān al-Karim</sup> (Beirut: Dār al-Yaqza al-'Arabiya, 1968), 2: 255-6. Ḥājji Khalifa assigns this work to 'Abd al-Razzāq al-Qāshāni under the title Ta'wilāt al-Qāshāni. See Ḥājji Khalifa, Kashf al-Zunūn 'an Asmā' al-Kutub wa al-Funūn (New York: Johnson Reprint, 1964). This opinion is echoed by Pierre Lory, saying that the attribution of the tafsir to Ibn 'Arabi was made on the basis of commercial considerations. He says: "Toutes ces raisons n'ont toutefois pas empêché les éditeurs de la dernière édition (Beyrouth, 1968) de garder l'ancien titre et de réaffirmer l'attribution à Ibn 'Arabi — probablement pour des raisons d'apportunité commerciale, le nom d'Ibn 'Arabi jouissant d'une notoriété nettement plus large que celui de Qāshāni..." See P. Lory, Les Commentaires, 20.

⁸⁴Seyyed Hossein Nasr, "The Qur'ān and Ḥadīth as Source and Inspiration of Islamic Philosophy," in History of Islamic Philosophy, ed. Seyyed Hossein Nasr and Oliver Leaman (London and New York: Routledge, 1996), 1: 31.

⁸⁵ See Al-'Akk, Uşul al-Tafsir, 217-220.

⁸⁶See Tanțāwi Jawhari, al-Jawahir fi Tafsir al-Qur'an al-Karim (Cairo: Mușțafa al-Bābi al-Ḥalabi, n.d.).

⁸⁷See Ḥanafī Aḥmad, Mu'jizat al-Qur'an fī Wasf al-Ka inat (Cairo: Maṭba'at Lajnat al-Bayan al-'Arabī, 1954).

⁸⁸See Mahmud, al-Qur'an, 51-61.

In the introduction to his Mu'jizat al-Qur'ān, Ḥanafī Aḥmad maintains that experts in natural sciences can see, apart from the literal meanings of Qur'ānic words, subtle meanings (ma'ānī daqīqa) that contain the basic essence of nature which was not known to previous generations. The subtle meanings are either derived from clear expressions (ṣarīḥ al-naṣṣ), or from the indications (ishārāt) and symbols (rumūz) of the Qur'ān.89 Therefore, according to Aḥmad and others, the Qur'ān must be interpreted in the light of modern science.

Bint al-Shāṭi', however, who believed that the Qur'ān is merely a book of religion, and not one of philosophy or science, maintains that a single Qur'ānic word has only one meaning, and must be interpreted as the Arab people of the Prophet's time would have understood it. On this basis, she does not accept the opinions of ishāri commentators who interpret symbolically the words al-duḥā (lit. morning hours) and al-layl (lit. night) of Q. 93 (S. al-Duḥā): 1-2 as referring to the face of Muḥammad and his hair, respectively; or as females and males of the ahl al-bayt, respectively; or as his knowledge of concealed matters and his forgiveness, respectively; or as metaphors of the acceptance and rejection of Islam, respectively. She also rejects the philosophical interpretation of the word

⁸⁹ Aḥmad, Mu'jizat al-Qur'ān, 1-2.

⁹⁰See Bint al-Shāṭi', al-Qur'an wa al-Tafsir, 15.

⁹¹ See Bint al-Shāṭi', al-Tafsir al-Bayani, 1: 32.

⁹²Al-Rāzī, al-Tafsīr al-Kabīr, 31: 210.

al-'aṣr (Q. 103: 1) suggested by al-Rāzi.93 The latter points out that the word is understood to mean "time" (al-dahr). He then says:

Time contains many amazing things $(a'\bar{aj}i\bar{b})$, because [in it] there are found happiness, distress, health, illness, wealth and poverty. There is even the most amazing thing, namely that the intellect is not able to consider it as non-existent. It can be, in fact, divided into years, months, days, and hours. ... How can it be then that time itself does not exsist? The intellect is also unable to consider time as existent, because the present time (had ir) can not be divided, whereas the past and the future do not exist. How does it come about that time exists? 94

Bint al-Shāṭi' considers al-Rāzī's interpretation to miss the point. The intended meaning of the word al-'aṣr is the "time" in which human beings are oppressed by troubles (mu'ānāt) and afflictions (tajrībāt).95 Likewise, she denies Muṣṭafā Maḥmūd's mystical interpretations of Q. 20 (S. Ṭāhā): 12,96 Q. 25 (S. al-Furqān): 7,97 Q. 39 (S. al-Zumar): 30,98 and Q. 48 (al-Fatḥ): 26,99 by saying that his ⁹³See Bint al-Shāṭi', al-Tafsir al-Bayani, 2: 75-80.

⁹⁴Al-Rāzī, al-Tafsir al-Kabīr, 32: 84.

⁹⁵Bint al-Shāṭi', al-Tafsir al-Bayāni, 2: 79-80. Her interpretation of Q. 103 (S. al-'Aṣr') will be discussed extensively in chapter two.

⁹⁶This verse reads: "Lo! I, even I, am thy Lord. So take off thy shoes, for lo! thou art in the holy valley of Tuwa." The word na'layka (thy shoes) is interpreted by Muṣtafā Maḥmūd as referring to the body (jasad) and material desire (nafs). The meaning of the verse is, accordingly, that those who would like to meet with God have to leave their bodies and desires through death or renunciation (zuhd). See Maḥmūd, al-Qur'ān, 134; and Bint al-Shāṭi', al-Qur'ān wa al-Tafsīr, 112.

⁹⁷The verse reads: "And they say: What aileth this messenger (of Allah) that he eateth food and walketh in the markets? Why is not an angel sent down unto him, to be a warner with him." On this verse, Mustafā Maḥmūd comments: "Indeed, it is the divine cover by which the secret of his prophethood is covered by a human ordinary cloth belonging to someone who eats food, and walks in the markets in order that the secret may not become vulgarized through disclosure and fame." Maḥmūd, al-Qur'an, 132. See also Bint al-Shāṭi', al-Qur'an wa al-Tafsir, 112.

interpretations are far from the textual context (siyāq) of the Qur'ān.¹00 On the basis of this reasoning, Bint al-Shāṭi', like Amīn al-Khūlī,¹01 also rejects "scientific" interpretation.¹02 Commenting on Q. 96 (S. al-'Alaq): 2, which speaks of the creation of a human being from 'alaq (blood clot), she says that the textual context (siyāq) does not indicate that the purpose of the verse is to direct the Prophet and believers to look at the science of embryology. It is, rather, a sign of God's power in the creation of human beings.¹03 ⁹⁸The verse says: "Lo! thou wilt die, and lo! they will die." Muṣṭafā Maḥmūd interprets it by saying: "Be aware of yourself [O prophet Muḥammad]! You do not exist. You are like a shadow; it exists on the earth as far as the sun is in the sky. If the sun sets, your existence will never come back. All shadows which are prolonged beside you also become hidden from you." Maḥmūd, al-Qur'ān, 238. See also Bint al-Shāṭi', al-Qur'ān wa al-Tafsir, 112.

The verse reads: "When those who disbelieve had set up in their hearts zealotry, the zealotry of the Age of Ignorance, then Allah sent down His peace of reassurance upon His messenger and upon the believers and imposed on them the word of self-restraint, for they were worthy of it and meet for it. And Allah is Aware of all things." The word kalimat al-taqwa (the word of self-restraint) is referred to by Muṣṭafa Maḥmūd as "the word of warning that all things come to annihilation (fana), and all this universe is a decoration of life, and a city whose destiny is spurious." See Maḥmūd, al-Qur'an, 240. See also Bint al-Shāṭi', al-Qur'an wa al-Tafsir, 112.

¹⁰⁰ See Bint al-Shāṭi', al-Qur'ān wa al-Tafsir, 113.

¹⁰¹See al-Khūli, Manāhij al-Tajdid, 287-296.

¹⁰²Bint al-Shāṭi', al-Qur'an wa al-Tafsir, 89-101. See also Jacques Jomier, "Aspects of the Qur'an Today," in Arabic Literature to the End of the Umayyad Period, ed. A. F. L. Beeston, T. M. Johnstone, R. B. Serjeant and G. R. Smith, (Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 1983), 266; and Andrew Rippin, Muslims: Their Religious Beliefs and Practices. Volume 2: The Contemporary Period (London & New York: Routledge, 1995), 94.

¹⁰³Bint al-Shāṭi', al-Tafsir al-Bayani, 2: 18. See also Amin, "A Study of Bint al-Shāṭi''s Exegesis," 88-90.

From the above survey, one can see that Bint al-Shāṭi''s criticisms of previous interpreters are grounded in the view that they took an improper approach to interpreting the Qur'ān. They searched first for ideas external to the Qur'ān, and then having found them, used them in their commentaries. It is, therefore, very possible that some Qur'ānic verses have been interpreted in such a way that they were made consonant with extraneous materials. In this regard, Abū Zayd comments that the variety of interpretive methods revolves around the difference in meaning between tafsir (or al-tafsir bi al-ma'thur) and ta'wil (or tafsir bi al-ra'y). Tafsir, on the one hand, approaches the Qur'ān by analyzing historical sources, i.e. the Qur'ān itself, and hadīth reports, and linguistic tools, which can help interpreters reach an "objective" undestanding (fahm mawdu'ī) of the text. On the other hand, in ta'wil interpreters begin with their personal hypotheses and then try to find Qur'ānic verses that support their hypotheses. 104

Bint al-Shāṭi''s criticism of the tendentious interpretations of the Qur'an corresponds to the critical stance taken by Emilio Betti (b. 1890)¹⁰⁵ and E. D. Hirsch Jr. (b. 1928) with respect to Martin Heidegger's (d. 1976)¹⁰⁶ and Hans-¹⁰⁴See Abū Zayd, Ishkaliyat al-Qira'at wa Aliyat al-Ta'wil (Beirut: al-Markaz al-Thaqafi al-'Arabi, 1994), 15-6.

¹⁰⁵Emilio Betti, Die Hermeneutik als Allgemeine Methodik der Geisteswissenschaften (Tübingen: J. C. B. Mohr (Paul Siebeck), 1962), 11-2.

¹⁰⁶See Martin Heidegger, Being and Time, section 31-34, trans. John Macquarrie and Edward Robinson, in The Hermeneutic Tradition from Ast to Ricoeur, ed. Gayle L. Ormiston and Alan D. Schrift (Albany: State University of New York Press, 1990), 115-44.

Georg Gadamer's (b. 1900)¹⁰⁷ idea of "subjective," and "prejudiced" projection in the interpretation of the text of the Bible. Unlike Heidegger and Gadamer, who maintain that every text should be interpreted in accordance with the logic of an interpreter, ¹⁰⁸ Betti and Hirsch point out that the task of an interpreter is simply to explore what the author meant, disregarding altogether one's own personal interests and projections. ¹⁰⁹

II. On "Forced" and I'jaz-Misoriented Interpretations

Two other kinds of interpretation that Bint al-Shāṭi' attacks are those which she regards as "forced" (al-tafsir al-mutakallaf) and i'jāz-misoriented interpretations. These interpretations represent hermeneutical reflections in ¹⁰⁷See Hans-Georg Gadamer, Truth and Method, ed. Garrett Barden and John Cumming (New York: Crossroad Publishing Company, 1988), 235-58; and idem, "The Universality of the Hermeneutical Problem," trans. David E. Linge, in The Hermeneutic Tradition from Ast to Ricoeur, 147-158;

¹⁰⁸Heidegger says: "Whenever something is interpreted as something, the interpretation will be founded essentially upon fore-having, fore-sight, and fore-conception. An interpretation is never a presuppositionless apprehending of something presented to us. If, when one is engaged in a particular concrete kind of interpretation, in the sense of exact textual interpretation, one likes to appeal [beruft] to what 'stands there', then one finds that what 'stands there' in the first instance is nothing other than the obvious undiscussed assumption [Vormeinung] of the person who does the interpreting." Martin Heidegger, Being and Time, section 31-34, trans. John Macquarrie and Edward Robinson, in The Hermeneutic Tradition from Ast to Ricoeur, 123.

Gadamer asserts that the expectation of meaning that is conceived to be directing our understanding of the text is "based on the commonality that unites us with tradition and that is constantly being developed." See Gadamer, Truth and Method, 261.

¹⁰⁹See Betti, Die Hermeneutik, 40-1; and Hirsch, Validity, 209-64; Grant R. Osborne, The Hermeneutical Spiral: A Comprehensive Introduction to Biblical Interpretation (Downers Grove: InterVarsity Press, 1991), 393; and Jean Grondin, Introduction to Philosophical Hermeneutics, trans. Joel Weinsheimer (New Haven and London: Yale University Press, 1994), 127.

which interpreters try to explain the Qur'an's unique linguistic style in order to make it accord with "common" Arabic linguistic rules. 110 This is closely related to the idea of the miraculous nature of the Qur'an. Before pursuing our discussion of Bint al-Shāṭi"s ideas, however, it would be useful first of all to glance at the various ideas held by previous scholars concerning this subject.

Muslims believe that the Qur'an, which was revealed to Muḥammad through Gabriel, is the Word of God.¹¹¹ It constitutes the sign (aya) of ¹¹⁰This definition is based on my understanding of Bint al-Shāṭi''s detailed elaboration of the subject under discussion in her works, especially al-Tafsir al-Bayāni li al-Qur'ān, al-Qur'ān wa al-Tafsir al-'Asri, and al-I'jāz al-Bayāni li al-Qur'ān.

[&]quot;Concerning whether or not the Qur'an is the verbatim Word of God, there is no agreement among scholars. Many scholars, on the one hand, contend that based on several hadiths, like those telling of the Prophet Muhammad's receiving the first revelation in the cave of Hira, the Qur'an is the divine word-for-word revelation. In support of this opinion, Gätje argues that this is "the meaning of the probably originally Aramaic word qur'an." On the basis of the wahy ("inspiration") concept derived from Q. 42: (S. Shura): 51-2, some scholars, like Fazlur Rahman and Hourani, on the other, maintain that although the Qur'an is regarded as the Word of God, this does not mean that the Prophet Muhammad received it from God verbally. The Qur'an, according to them, was "sent down" through the mediatory agent Gabriel to the heart of Muhammad, and then he expressed it in his own language. See, e.g., Mohammed Arkoun, Rethinking Islam: Common Questions, Uncommon Answers (Boulder, San Francisco, and Oxford: Westview Press, 1994), 31; Josef van Ess, "Verbal Inspiration? Language and Revelation in Classical Islamic Theology," in The Qur'an as Text, ed. Stefan Wild (Leiden: E. J. Brill, 1996), 177-94; Helmut Gätje, The Qur'an and its Exegesis, 5; and William A. Graham, "The Earliest Meaning of 'Qur'an'," in Die Welt des Islams 23-24 (1984), 360-77, especially 376. Cf. Fazlur Rahman, Islam (Chicago and London: University of Chicago Press, 1979), 30-33; and G. F. Hourani, "The Qur'an's Doctrine of Prophecy," in Logos Islamikos: Studia Islamica in Honorem Georgii Michaelis Wickens, ed. Roger M. Savory and Dionisius A. Agius (Toronto: Pontifical Institute of Mediaeval Studies, 1984), 179. Watt tries to relate the above belief with the polemics concerning the problem of the createdness of the Qur'an. See W. Montgomery Watt, "Early Discussions about the Qur'an," the Muslim World 40 (1950), 27-40.

Muḥammad's prophethood (nubūwa) and his miracle (mu'jiza).¹¹² They base this notion on several Qur'ānic verses. Al-Zamakhsharī, for instance, comments on the words uḥkimat āyāluhu (its verses are perfected) of Q. 11 (S. Huāl): 1 in reference to the idea of the inimitability of the Qur'ān.¹¹³ Likewise, Ibn Kathīr, in commenting on the mysterious letters (al-ḥuruf al-muqaṭṭa'a) of the Qur'ān, affirms the miraculous nature of the Qur'ān, a book that consists of the letters known to the Arabs,¹¹⁴ an opinion which is supported by Bint al-Shāṭi'.¹¹⁵ The question of which aspect[s] of the Qur'ān are actually inimitable (mu'jiz) has long been the subject of debate. Among those who have documented the discussion, there is Abdul Aleem who, in his article "Tjazu'l-Qur'ān," surveys the history of the emergence of i'jāz concepts and the debate over this problem among the classical theologians.¹¹⁶ More comprehensively, Na'īm al-Ḥimṣī and Issa J. Boullata in their articles "Tārīkh Fikrat I'jāz al-Qur'ān" and "The Rhetorical Interpretation of the Qur'ān," respectively, elaborate the main ideas on the ¹¹²See, e.g., Arthur Jeffery, "The Qur'an as Scripture," the Muslim World 40 (1950), 43.

¹¹³ Al-Zamakhshari, al-Kashshaf, 2: 326. On this page he interprets Q. 11: 1 as meaning that "its verses are composed firmly and perfectly; there is neither contradiction nor imperfection in them." This interpretation was then adopted by many exegetes, e.g., al-Nasafi (d. 710/1310) in his Tafsir. See 'Abd Allāh ibn Aḥmad al-Nasafi, Tafsir al-Nasafi: Madārik al-Tanzīl wa Ḥaqā'iq al-Ta'wil, ed. Zakarīyā 'Umayrāt (Beirut: Dār al-Kutub al-'Arabīya, 1995), 1: 558.

¹¹⁴ Ismā'īl ibn Kathīr al-Dimashqī, Tafsīr al-Qur'ān al-'Azīm, ed. Yūsuf 'Abd al-Raḥmān (Beirut: Dār al-Ma'rifa, 1987), 1: 40.

¹¹⁵ See Bint al-Shāṭi', al-I'jāz al-Bayāni, 158-180.

¹¹⁶See Abdul Aleem, "'Ijazu'l-Qur'ān [sic]," Islamic Culture 7 (1933), 64-82 and 215-33.

aspects of i'jāz that have concerned both classical and modern scholars.¹¹⁷ In addition, the latter also discusses Western perspectives on the subject.¹¹⁸ In summary, one might say that there are various opinions on what constitutes i'jāz. Some scholars, such as al-Khaṭṭābī (d. 388/998),¹¹⁹ have pointed out that the i'jāz lies only in the eloquent style of the language of the Qur'ān (i.e., faṣāḥa and naẓm) in conveying the divine message. Others, such as al-Bāqillānī (d. 403/1013),¹²⁰ al-Rummānī (d. 386/996),¹²¹ al-Jurjānī (d. 470/1078),¹²² and al-Zamakhsharī (d.

¹¹⁷See Na'īm al-Ḥimṣī, "Tārīkh Fikrat I'jāz al-Qur'ān," Majallat al-Majma' al-'Ilmī al-'Arabī, 27 (1952), 240-63, 418-33, 571-86; 28 (1953), 61-78, 242-56; 29 (1954), 104-14, 239-51, 417-24, 573-9; and 30 (1955), 106-13, 299-311. See also Boullata, "The Rhetorical Interpretation of the Qur'ān: i'jāz and Related Topics," in Approaches to the History of the Interpretation of the Qur'ān, ed. Andrew Rippin (Oxford: Clarendon Press, 1988), 139-157. Cf. Blachère, Introduction, 169-81; Jaroslav Stetkevych, "Arabic Hermeneutical Terminology: Paradox and the Production of Meaning," Journal of Near Eastern Studies 48 (1989), 84-87; and Farid Esack, "Qur'anic Hermeneutics: Problems and Prospects," The Muslim World 83 (1993), 124-29.

¹¹⁸ See Boullata, "The Rhetorical Interpretation," 155-7.

¹¹⁹ See Hamd ibn Muḥammad al-Khaṭṭābī, Bayān I'jāz al-Qur'ān, published in Thalāth Rasā'il fī I'jāz al-Qur'ān, ed. Muḥammad Khalaf Allāh and Muḥammad Zaghlūl (Cairo: Dār al-Ma'ārif, n.d.), 19-65. See also Boullata, "The Rhetorical Interpretation of the Qur'ān," 144; Mustansir Mir, Coherence in the Qur'ān: A Study of Iṣlāḥi's Concept of Nazm in Tadabbur-i Qur'ān (Indianapolis: American Trust Publications, 1986), 11; and Sahiron Syamsuddin, "al-Bāqillānī vs. al-Khaṭṭābī on Qur'ānic I'jāz Concerning the Truthful Information about Future Events," in Yudian Wahyudi, et al., The Dynamics of Islamic Civilization, introd. Issa J. Boullata (Yogyakarta: Forum Komunikasi Alumni Program Pembibitan Calon Dosen IAIN se-Indonesia & Titian Ilahi Press, 1998), 3-10.

¹²⁰See Muḥammad ibn al-Ṭayyib al-Bāqillānī, I'jāz al-Qur'ān, ed. 'Imād al-Dīn Aḥmad Ḥaydar (Beirut: Mu'assasat al-Kutub al-Thaqāfīyah, 1986), 57-75. See also Boullata, "The Rhetorical Interpretation of the Qur'ān," 144-5; Mustansir Mir, Coherence of the Qur'ān, 12-3; and Syamsuddin, "al-Bāqillānī vs. al-Khaṭṭābī on Qur'ānic l'jāz," 3-10.

¹²¹See 'Alī ibn 'Īsā al-Rummānī, al-Nukat fī I'jāz al-Qur'ān, published in Thalāth Rasā'il fī I'jāz al-Qur'ān, ed. Muḥammad Khalaf Allāh and Muḥammad Zaghlūl (Cairo: Dār al-Ma'ārif, n.d.), 69-104. See also Boullata, "The Rhetorical Interpretation of the Qur'ān," 143.

538/1144) viewed the information about concealed materials, i.e., the stories of previous prophets and future events, in addition to the linguistic eloquence, as the miraculous aspects. 123 Still others, such as al-Nazzām (d. 232/846) and Hishām al-Fuwaṭī (d. 218/833) whose opinion, according to van Ess, was adopted by some Shī'ī theologians, 124 maintained that the divine action of turning away (sarfa) the Arabs from producing the like of the Qur'ān constituted the only i'jāz. 125 Some modern scholars, like Ḥanafī Aḥmad and Muḥammad

¹²²See 'Abd al-Qāhir ibn 'Abd al-Raḥmān al-Jurjānī, Dala'il al-l'jāz (Damascus: Maktabat Sa'd al-Dīn, 1987). See also Boullata, "The Rhetorical Interpretation of the Qur'ān," 146-7; Mustansir Mir, Coherence of the Qur'ān, 14-5.

¹²³ Al-Khaṭṭābī and al-Qādī 'Abd al-Jabbār, in spite of their considering the information on concealed events as supplementary (takmīlī) and functional (tawzifī) signs of prophethood, did not agree with the conjecture of the future events-providing-Qur'ānic i'jāz on the grounds that the taḥaddī (challenge) of the Arabs to produce the like of the Qur'ān, which is expressed in many verses, is without specification, whereas not every sūra (chapter) contains the information of concealed materials. The taḥaddī, they added, is merely considered meaningful if it is related to the highest ability of the Arabs at the time of revelation, namely their linguistic ability. See al-Khaṭṭabī, Bayān l'jāz al-Qur'ān, 25; and al-Qādī 'Abd al-Jabbār, "I'jāz al-Qur'ān," in his al-Mughnī fī Abwāb al-Tawḥīd wa al-'Adl (Cairo: Maṭba'at Dār al-Kutub, 1960), 16: 220. See also Syamsuddin, "al-Bāqillāni vs. al-Khaṭṭābī on Qur'ānic l'jāz," 6-7. Hourani agrees with the suggestion that the foretelling of the previous prophets constitutes the proof for the prophecy of Muḥammad. See Hourani, "The Qur'ān's Doctrine," 180.

¹²⁴See Josef van Ess, Theologie und Gessellschaft im 2. und 3. Jahrhundert Hidschra (Berlin & New York: De Gruyter, 1992), 3: 412.

¹²⁵ Al-Rummānī, al-Nukat, 101. Although not regarding the ṣarfa as the only aspect of i'jāz, al-Rummānī, on the one hand, in his al-Nukat supports the notion. On the other, al-Khaṭṭābī maintains that Q. 88 (S. al-Isrā'): 17, which points to an attempt of constraint (takalluf), exertion (ijtihād), readiness (ta'ahhub) and gathering (iḥtishād) to produce the like of the Qur'ān, is opposed to the idea of ṣarfa. See al-Khaṭṭābī, Bayān, 21. See also John Wansbrough, Quranic Studies: Sources and Methods of Scriptural Interpretation (Oxford: Oxford University Press, 1977), 79; Boullata, "The Rhetorical Interpretation of the Qur'ān," 142-4; van Ess, Theologie und Gessellschaft, 3: 408-13; and Ismail K. Poonawala, "An Ismā'īlī on the I'jāz al-Qur'ān," Journal of the American Oriental Society 108 (1988), 380 ff.

Shaḥrūr, add to the above list the Qur'ān's anticipation of modern sciences. All these opinions, with the exception of the idea of sarfa, refer to the miraculous literary expressions and the contents of the Qur'ān.

Bint al-Shāṭi' points out that, regardless of the various opinions that exist on the subject, there is no disagreement on the rhetorical inimitability (al-i'jaz al-bayānī) of the Qur'ān. It was in fact widely acknowledged in Muḥammad's own day, even by those who did not believe in his prophethood. The unbelievers' claims that the Qur'ān was siḥr (magic), shi'r (poetry), and kahāna (soothsaying) — even though they knew that the Qur'ān was actually none of these things —127 actually constitute, according to Bint al-Shāṭi', a clear affirmation of the extraordinary power of the Qur'ān to affect the hearts and minds of those who had not seen the like of it except in the words of magicians, poets and soothsayers. That is why the tyrants of the Quraysh warned people against listening to the Qur'ān, for its extraordinary power is said to have persuaded many, like 'Umar ibn al-Khaṭṭāb, to embrace Islam. 129

¹²⁶See Ḥanafī Aḥmad, Mu'jizat al-Qur'an fī Wasf al-Ka'inat (Cairo: Maṭba'at Lajnat al-Bayān al-'Arabī, 1954); and Muḥammad Shaḥrūr, al-Kitāb wa al-Qur'an: Qira'a Mu'aṣira (Damascus: al-Ahālī li al-Ṭibā'a wa al-Nashr wa al-Tawzī', 1990), 187-8.

¹²⁷Their claims are documented, for example, in Q. 69 (S. al-Ḥāqqa): 38-42.

¹²⁸ Bint al-Shāṭi', Kitabunā al-Akbar (Omdurman: Jāmi'at Umm Durmān, 1967), 3.

¹²⁹See Muḥammad ibn Isḥāq ibn Yasār, Kitāb al-Siyar wa al-Maghāzi, ed. Suhayl Zakkār (Beirut: Dār al-Fikr, 1978), 183; and Ismā'īl ibn Kathīr al-Dimashqī, al-Sira al-Nabawiya, ed. Muṣṭafā 'Abd al-Wāḥid (Beirut: Dār al-Iḥyā' al-'Arabī, n.d.), 2: 34-5. In the long report on 'Umar ibn al-Khaṭṭāb's adherence to Islam it is recorded that after reciting Q. 20 (S. Ṭāhā) he said: "How beautiful and glorious this Word is!"

It is clear that what inspired Bint al-Shāṭi' to venture the idea of the rhetorical inimitability of the Qur'ān was her research into the huruf al-muqaṭṭa'a which stand at the beginning of many Qur'ānic surās. 130 In the 29 surās 131 where the huruf are found, these are followed directly by the words Qur'ān, Tanzīl, or Kitāb, and serve to indicate the inimitability of the Holy Scripture. 132 Although three of the surās, i.e., Q. 19 (S. Maryam), Q. 29 (S. al-'Ankabūt) and Q. 30 (S. al-Rūm), do not follow this pattern, they nonetheless, Bint al-Shāti' affirms, consist of verses that speak of the victory of the Qur'ān and its miraculous nature. 133 On the basis of a "complete inductive investigation" (al-istiqrā' al-kāmīl) of the 29

¹³⁰See Bint al-Shāṭi', al-I'jāz al-Bayāni, 140.

¹³¹They are Q. 68 (S. al-Qalam), Q. 50 (S. Qaf), Q. 38 (S. Ṣad), Q. 7 (S. al-A'raf), Q. 36 (S. Ya Sin), Q. 19 (S. Maryam), Q. 20 (S. Ta Ha), Q. 26 (S. al-Shu'ara'), Q. 27 (S. al-Naml), Q. 28 (S. al-Qaṣaṣ), Q. 12 (S. Yusuf), Q. 15 (al-Ḥijr), Q. 31 (S. Luqman), Q. 40 (S. Ghafir), Q. 41 (Fuṣṣilat), Q. 42 (S. al-Shūra), Q. 43 (al-Zukhruf), Q. 44 (S. al-Dukhān), Q. 45 (S. al-Jathiya), Q. 46 (S. al-Ahqaf), Q. 14 (S. Ibrāhīm), Q. 32 (S. al-Sajda), Q. 52 (S. al-Tūr), Q. 69 (S. al-Haqqa), Q. 30 (S. al-Rum), Q. 29 (S. al-'Ankabut), Q. 2 (S. al-Bagara), Q. 3 (S. Al 'Imran), and Q. 13 (S. al-Ra'd). The numbers of the suras that I provide here are their canonical (mushafi) numbers. Bint al-Shāti' arranges them in her al-I'jāz al-Bayāni in accordance with their chronological order of revelation. Bint al-Shati's arrangement of the chronological order of revelation accords with that of al-Biqa'i, Ibn Nadim and Nöldeke. See Bint al-Shāṭi', al-I'jaz al-Bayani, 160-79. See also Burhan al-Din Ibrahim ibn 'Umar Biqa'i, Nazm al-Durar fi Tanasub al-Ayat wa al-Suwar (Hayderabad: Majlis Da'irat al-Ma'arif al-Uthmaniya, 1969); Muhammad ibn Ishaq ibn al-Nadim, Kitab al-Fihrist (Beirut: Maktabat al-Khayyat, [1966]); Theodor Nöldeke, Geschichte des Qorans (Hildesheim & New York: G. Olms, 1970); and Abū 'Abd Allāh al-Zanjāni, Tārikh al-Qur'an (Beirut: Mu'assasat al-A'lami li al-Matbū'at, 1969), 49-57.

¹³² See, e.g., Ibn Kathir; Tafsir, 1: 40; and al-Nasafi, Tafsir al-Nasafi, 1: 12-3.

¹³³Bint al-Shāṭi', al-I'jāz al-Bayāni, 158-60. In these passages she mentions the verses which speak of the subject matter, namely Q. 19 (S. Maryam): 16, 41, 51, 54, 56, 97 and 98; Q. 29 (S. al-'Ankabūt): 45-52; and Q. 30 (S. al-Rūm): 58-60.

sūras according to their chronological revelation, Bint al-Shāṭi' comes to certain conclusions, one of which is:

They (al-huruf al-muqaṭṭa'a) start in Sūrat al-Qalam, one of the first of the revelation, directing attention to the subtle meaning of the particle (sirr al-harf), then become more numerous and come successively in the middle of the Meccan period from Sūrat Qāf—which comes 34th in the chronological order of revelation—to Sūrat al-Qaṣaṣ—which was revealed 49th in order—and in which the quarrel against the Qur'ān reaches its climax. The problem of taḥaddi (challenge) is then demonstrated; and the Qur'ānic verses challenge them (the unbelievers) to compose the like of the Qur'ān or one sūra of it; [and this was the situation] until the beginning of the Medinan period in which was revealed the verses of sūrat al-Baqara. The fierce quarrel ended after the proof of the truth of the mu'jiza was believed by them due to their inability to produce one sūra of the like of the Qur'ān. 134

In other words, according to her, the secret of the huruf al-muqatia'a, by means of which the Qur'an was revealed, constitutes the indication of its rhetorical i'jaz, meaning that although the Arabs of the time of the Prophet were familiar with the huruf, and although their literary ability reached its highest level of quality, they were unable to produce the like of the Qur'an. This emphasizes the fact that there is no written work produced by human beings that is equivalent to the Qur'an in terms of its unique rhetorical expression.

Bint al-Shāṭi', however, was not satisfied with the explanations of the rhetorical $i'j\bar{a}z$ offered by previous scholars, some of whom were mentioned earlier. After alluding to their opinions on the subject, she says:

¹³⁴Bint al-Shāṭi', al-I'jāz al-Bayāni, 179.

Nevertheless, the rhetorical $i'j\bar{a}z$ [that they have referred to] continued to evolve within the boundaries of the unchanged traditional forms and overblown explanations. Someone like al-Khaṭṭābī from the fourth century [of Hijra] does not find the explanations [of Qur'ānic $i'j\bar{a}z$) satisfying in this regard, or able to cure the "disease of ignorance." The explanations are even considered no longer compatible with the glory of the miraculous book, and do not have any significance to this generation of Arabs who desire to unite with the miracle of the highest example of rethoric.¹³⁵

Accordingly, Bint al-Shāṭi' tries to provide the reader with a new approach. She maintains that the rhetorical inimitability of the Qur'ān lies in every particle (harf), word (lafz or kalima) and structure (uslūb or ta'bir). 136 Each of these three linguistic components of the Qur'ān conveys a subtle meaning (sirr, pl. asrār); there is no single structure, word, or even particle, which is employed meaninglessly or improperly in the Qur'ān.

This is why Bint al-Shāṭi' criticizes exegetes and linguists for carelessness when dealing with the style of the Qur'ān in terms of the three linguistic elements which are unique to it. To prove her point, she discusses the Qur'ānic employment of the particle ba, for example, which comes before the predicate of the negative ma¹³⁷ and laysa, laysa and which the classical exegetes and linguists ¹³⁵Bint al-Shāṭi', al-I'jāz al-Bayāni, 135. Cf. Michael Sells, "Sound, Spirit, and Gender in Sūrat al-Qadr," Journal of the American Oriental Society 111 (1991), 240. In this passage he says: "The literatures devoted to i'jāz al-Qur'ān (the inimitability of the Qur'an) and faḍā'il al-Qur'ān (the excellences of the Qur'ān) offer strong anecdotal affirmation concerning the sound quality of the Qur'ān, but traditional analysis focuses upon rhetorical featers usually unrelated to the interaction of sound and meaning."

¹³⁶See Bint al-Shāṭi', al-I'jaz al-Bayani, 136-286.

¹³⁷See Q. 2 (S. al-Baqara): 8, 7, 85, 96, 102, 140, 144, 149, 167; Q. 3 (S. Al̄ 'Imran̄): 99; Q. 6 (S. al-An'am̄): 107, 132; Q. 11 (S. Hud̄): 29, 83, 123; Q. 12 (S. Yusuf̄): 17, 44, 103; Q. 14

considered otiose (zāid).¹³⁹ According to her, the preposition bā (read: bi) in the negative informative expression (al-jumla al-khabariya al-manfiya), on the one hand, which is alleged by many exegetes to have functioned as an affirmative particle (tawkid) of the negated present with the particles mā and laysa, points to the determination of the negation with the repudiation (taqrir al-nafy bi al-juhud wa al-inkar) of the existence of a subject contained in the statement.¹⁴⁰ Thus, Q. 68 (S. al-Qalam): 2 which reads: 'Wa-mā anta bi-ni'mati rabbika bi-majnunin' (Thou art not, for thy Lord's favour unto thee, a madman), for example, is interpreted in reference to the total repudiation of the madness of the Prophet Muḥammad,¹⁴¹ a rumour spread by the Meccan unbelievers.¹⁴² The Qur'ānic usages of the particle bā in the negative interrogative expression (al-jumla al-istifhāmiya al-manfiya), on the other hand, refers in her view to the elimination of the negation or, in other

⁽S. Ibrāhīm): 22; Q. 16 (S. al-Naḥl): 46; Q. 26 (S. al-Shu'arā'): 114, 138; Q. 27 (S. al-Naml): 81, 93; Q. 30 (S. al-Rūm): 83; Q. 35 (S. Fāṭir): 22; Q. 37 (S. al-Ṣaffāt): 162; Q. 40 (S. Ghāfīr): 56; Q. 41 (S. Fuṣṣilat): 46; Q. 42 (S. al-Shūrā): 6; Q. 50 (S. Qāf): 29; Q. 52 (S. al-Ṭūr): 29; Q. 68 (S. al-Qalam): 2; Q. 81 (S. al-Takwir): 22, 24; and Q. 86 (S. al-Ṭāriq): 14. See also Bint al-Shāṭi', al-I'jāz al-Bayānī, 184-6.

¹³⁸See Q. 2 (S. al-Baqara): 267; Q. 3 (S. Al Imrān): 182; Q. 5 (S. al-Ma ida): 116; Q. 6 (S. al-An ām): 30, 53, 66, 89, 122; Q. 7 (S. al-A rāf): 172; Q. 11 (S. Hūd): 81; Q. 15 (S. al-Ḥijr): 20; Q. 29 (S. al-'Ankabūt): 10; Q. 36 (S. Yā Sīn): 81; Q. 39 (S. al-Zumar): 36, 37; Q. 46 (S. al-Aḥqāf): 32, 34; Q. 58 (S. al-Mujādīla): 10; Q. 75 (S. al-Qiyāma): 40; and Q. 95 (S. al-Tīn): 8. See also Bint al-Shāṭi', al-I'jāz al-Bayānī, 186-9.

¹³⁹See, e.g., al-Zamakhsharī, al-Kashshaf, 4: 585; and Abū Ḥayyān, al-Baḥr al-Muḥiṭ, 8: 308. See also Boullata, "The Rhetorical Interpretation of the Qur'ān," 153.

¹⁴⁰Bint al-Shāṭi', al-I'jāz al-Bayāni, 190.

¹⁴¹See Bint al-Shāṭi', al-Tafsir al-Bayani, 45-7.

¹⁴²See, e.g., al-Zamakhsharī, al-Kashshaf, 4: 585; and Abū Ḥayyān, al-Baḥr al-Muḥiṭ, 8: 308.

words, the affirmation (ithbat) of the subject matter conveyed in the statement. The Qur'anic words alaysa Allahu bi aḥkami l-ḥakimina (Q. 95: 8), for instance, are interpreted as meaning that God is the most conclusive judge. It can be inferred from the above discussion that, according to Bint al-Shāṭi', the weakness of the view that the particles are otiose derives from a lack of understanding of their subtle meaning, which results from an incomplete investigation of all instances of their usage in the Qur'an.

Furthermore, Bint al-Shāṭi' shows the weakness of the above approach in dealing with the uslub of Q. 9 (S. al-Tawba): 44 which reads: "Lā yasta'dhinuka l-ladhīna yu'minuna bi l-lāhi wa l-yawmi l-ākhiri an yujāhidu bi-amwālihim wa-anfusihim...," and which, in accordance with its clear textual context, states that the believers did not ask permission for jihād (holy war). 144 Al-Ṭabarī, however, interprets it as meaning that the believers did not ask the Prophet for permission (isti'dhān) to abstain (al-tark) from fighting against the enemies of God. 145 Bint al-Shāṭi' does not accept such an interpretation. For her, al-Ṭabarī's interpretation does not take into account the miraculous rhetoric of the Qur'ān, in the sense that he either considers the particle lā meaningless, or simply does not understand the elegance of the Qur'ānic structure in this verse. Referring to three ¹⁴³Bint al-Shāṭi', al-I'jāz al-Bayāni, 184; 188 and 190.

¹⁴⁴ Bint al-Shāṭi', al-I'jaz al-Bayani, 199.

¹⁴⁵ Al-Ṭabarī, Jāmi' al-Bayan, 10: 100.

other verses in the same $su\bar{r}a^{146}$ which state that the $isti'dha\bar{n}$ (asking permission) not to perform $jiha\bar{d}$ was sought only by the $muna\bar{f}iqu\bar{n}$ (hypocrites), she says that the proper interpretation of Q. 9 (S. al-Tawba): 44 should signify the negation of the believers' $isti'dha\bar{n}$ to undertake $jiha\bar{d}$. Following al-Zamakhsharī's view, 147 she, among other modern exegetes, 148 argues that it does not make any rhetorical sense to relate the believers with the negation of $isti'dha\bar{n}$ to refrain from the obligation of $jiha\bar{d}$. The beauty of the verse lies in the fact that, given that $jiha\bar{d}$ is obligatory, the believers perform it even without $isti'dha\bar{n}$. 149

Another example of "forced" interpretation which ignores the unique rhetoric of the Qur'an concerns the interpretation of the word dall in Q. 93 (S. al-Duḥā): 7.150 The word dall in the verse, whose basic meaning is faqid al-ṭariq

¹⁴⁶The verses are Q. 9 (S. al-Tawba): 45-46, which read: "They alone ask leave of thee who believe in Allah and the Last Day, and whose hearts feel doubt, so in their doubt they waver. And if they had wished to go forth they would assuredly have made ready some equipment, but Allah was averse to their being sent forth and held them back and (it was said unto them): Sit ye with the sedentary," and Q. 9 (S. al-Tawba): 83, which reads: "If Allah bring thee back (from the campaign) unto a party of them and they ask of thee leave to go out (to fight), then say unto them: Ye shall never more go out with me nor fight with me against a foe. Ye were content with sitting still the first time. So sit still, with the useless."

¹⁴⁷See al-Zamakhshari, al-Kashshaf, 2: 274-5.

¹⁴⁸See, e.g., Sayyid Qutb, Fi Zilal al-Qur'an (Cairo: Dar al-Shuruq, 1988), 3: 1662. In this passage, he says: "Those who believe in God and the Day of Reward and Punishment do not wait to be permitted to perform the obligation of jihad, and do not hesitate in fulfilling the invitation to participate in the way of God with their wealth and souls...."

¹⁴⁹See Bint al-Shāṭi', al-I'jāz al-Bayānī, 199-200.

¹⁵⁰The verse reads: "Wa-wajadaka ḍāllan fa-hadā" (Did He not find thee wandering and direct [thee]?).

(someone who has lost his way), is interpreted by many exegetes¹⁵¹ as referring to the technical term kufr (unbelief), or, according to Izutsu's finding, a part of the larger concept of kufr as opposed to the term shukr. 152 It is alleged that Muqatil ibn Sulayman, al-Kalbi, and al-Suddi interpreted the verse as meaning that before his prophethood, and until perhaps as late as the age of forty, the Prophet Muhammad used to follow the belief of jahiliya ("ignorance"). 153 On the same technical basis, but with a different interpretation, Abū Ḥayyān points out in his al-Baḥr al-Muḥit that the meaning of the verse is that "wa-wajada rahṭaka dallan fa-hadahu bika" (He [God] found your society going astray from the right way [i.e., kufr], and He then guided them through you). 154 Such interpretations are seen by Bint al-Shāṭi' as failing to understand the Qur'ān's rhetorical usage of the word and its roots. She says: "Indeed, the Qur'anic employment (of the word and its roots) does not cease to refer to the technical sense. There may, however, be perceived the lexicographical meaning of the word, i.e., losing one's way or lacking guidance to the right way."155 To support her position, she then demonstrates the various meanings of the word in its Qur'anic usages. She ¹⁵¹See, e.g., Abū Ḥayyān, al-Baḥr al-Muḥiţ, 7: 486.

¹⁵²See Toshihiko Izutsu, Ethico-Religious Concepts in the Qur'an (Montreal: McGill University Press, 1966), 133-7.

¹⁵³See al-Rāzī, al-Tafsir al-Kabir, 30: 424.

¹⁵⁴ Abū Ḥayyān, al-Baḥr al-Muḥiṭ, 7: 486. In this case, Abū Ḥayyān points to the elliptic muḍāf (construct state), i.e. rahṭ before the word ka, the muḍāf ilayh (the second noun of a genitive construction).

finally concludes that the meaning of the verse is that, before his prophethood, the Prophet Muḥammad was confused (mutaḥayyir), and then states, in an explanation which is consonant with Muḥammad 'Abduh's interpretation: 156

I do not have a position here except to repeat what God said to His prophet: 'Thou knewest not what the Scpripture was, nor what the Faith.' (Q. 42 [S. al-Shūrā]: 52). Before his prophethood, he used to be in a state of confusion; he did not agree with conditions in his society, but he did not know where the right way was, or how to win salvation. He was in this state of confusion many years until the revelation came to him in order to guide him to the right religion and the right way of life.¹⁵⁷

In my study of Bint al-Shāṭi''s criticism of previous interpretations, I am not concerned with whether her exegetical positions on the above matters are better than others', but rather, with her dissatisfaction with the previous hermeneutical methods in interpreting the Qur'ān, and with her reconstructive attempt to apply the method that she believed to be more appropriate to Qur'ānic hermeneutics. One can see from the above discussion that, according to Bint al-Shāṭi', the failure of previous exegetes to appreciate the Qur'ānic message lay in their provocative attempts to insert extra-Qur'ānic, prejudiced material, and in their ignorance of the unique Qur'ānic rhetoric. This resulted from the intentional, or at least misguided, reliance on invalid hermeneutical methods. In an attempt to right this situation, Bint al-Shāṭi' applied the method that she calls "al-manhaj al-istiqra i (inductive method), using the cross-referential procedure, without however igoring the textual and historical contexts, an approach which will be analyzed in more detail in chapter two.

¹⁵⁵ Bint al-Shāṭi', al-Tafsir al-Bayani, 1: 45.

^{156&#}x27; Abduh, Tafsir Juz' 'Amma, 84-5.

¹⁵⁷ Bint al-Shāti', al-Tafsir al-Bayani, 46-7.

Chapter Two

Fundamental Elements of Bint al-Shāṭi"s Method of Interpretation

I. The Cross-referential Method

A. In the Classical Tradition

Cross-referential hermeneutics of the Qur'ān, known to scholars in the field as the concept of al-Qur'ān yufassiru ba'ḍuhu ba'ḍan (one part of the Qur'ān interprets another), is basically not a new approach to Qur'ānic exegesis. This method, which al-Shāṭibi (d. 790/1388) refers to in his al-Muwafaqat as the concept of kalāmu-llāhi huwa kalāmun wāḥidun (God's Speech is a unitary Speech), and which is regarded by Ibn Taymiya (d. 728/1328) and al-Zarkashi (d. 793/1392) as the best way of interpretation, is traced by some to the Qur'ānic verse Q. 4 (S. al-Nisā'): 82. Muqātil ibn Sulaymān (d. 150/767), for instance, in his Tafsir al-Khams Mi'at Aya min al-Qur'ān, takes this approach when dealing with the problem of drinking khamr (wine) from the Qur'ānic ¹⁵⁸See M. A. S. Abdel Haleem, "Context and Internal Relationships: Keys to Quranic Exegesis. A Study of Sūrat al-Raḥmān (Qur'ān Chapter 53)," in Approaches to the Qur'ān, 73.

¹⁵⁹See Ibrāhīm ibn Mūsā al-Shāṭibī, al-Muwājaqāt fī Uṣul al-Aḥkām, ed. Muḥammad Muḥy al-Dīn 'Abd al-Ḥāmid (Cairo: Maktabat wa Maṭba'at Muḥammad 'Alī Ṣabīḥ wa Awlādih, 1969), 3: 284. In this passage, al-Shāṭibī says: "The meaning of one part of the Qur'ān is somehow dependent on another part. That is due to the fact that the meanings of many Qur'ānic verses are not understood perfectly without referring to other verses."

¹⁶⁰ Ibn Taymiya, Uşul al-Tafsir, 93; and Muḥammad ibn 'Abd Allāh al-Zarkashi, al-Burhān fi 'Ulum al-Qur'an, ed. Muḥammad Abū al-Faḍl Ibrāhim (Cairo: Dar Iḥyā' al-perspective. For him, Q. 16 (S. al-Naḥl): 67,¹⁶¹ in which khamr is said to be lawful, Q. 2 (S. al-Baqara): 219,¹⁶² which declares that the danger of khamr is much greater than its benefit, Q. 4 (S. al-Nisa): 43,¹⁶³ which forbids it for those who want to perform prayer, and Q. 5 (S. al-Ma'ida): 90,¹⁶⁴ which totally forbids it, are to be dealt with together. Through this approach, he concludes that in the Prophet's day the process by which the consumption of khamr was forbidden was a gradual one, and that the verses which allow it — either completely or under certain conditions — are eventually abrogated (mansukh).¹⁶⁵ Like Muqātil, who applied the cross-referential approach in detecting abrogated verses (mansukhāt), al-Zamakhsharī often used the method in order to clarify the mutashābihāt (ambiguous verses), despite his inconsistency in applying it due to his sectarian bias. When dealing with Q. 11 (S. Hūd): 106-7,¹⁶⁶ for instance, which verses were Kutub al-'Arabīya, 1957), 2: 175. See also Abdel Haleem, "Context and Internal Relationships," 73.

¹⁶¹The verse reads: "And of the fruits of the date-palm, and grapes, whence ye derive strong drink and (also) good nourishment."

¹⁶²The verse reads: "They question thee about strong drink and games of chance. Say: In both is great sin, and (some) utility for men; but the sin of them is greater than their usefulness."

¹⁶³The verse reads: "O ye who believe! Draw not near unto prayer when ye are drunken..."

¹⁶⁴The verse reads: "O ye who believe! Strong drink and games of chance and idols and divining arrows are only an infamy of Satan's handiwork. Leave it aside in order that ye may succeed."

¹⁶⁵See Muqatil ibn Sulayman, Tafsir al-Khams Mi'at Aya min al-Qur'an, ed. Isaiah Goldfeld (Shfaram: al-Mashriq Press, 1980), 141-7.

often cited by the Jabrīya to justify their deterministic beliefs, he relates them to verse 108 of the same sūra. 167 Affirming that the verses do not refer to determinism, but of God's absolute will to punish wrong-doers and to reward those who do good, al-Zamkhasharī says: "Think of this. Indeed, part of the Qur'ān interprets another." 168

The cross-referential approach is also applied by Ibn Taymiya in his Majmu at Tafsir. 169 Dealing with Q. 87 (S. al-A'la): 10,170 which speaks of the concept of khashya (fear), he declares the verse to be too general in import. Hence, in order to extract more detailed information about the meaning of khashya and its consequences, he refers to other verses. Turning to Q. 50 (S. Qaf): 45,171 Q. 52 (S. al-Ṭur): 26-7,172 and Q. 79 (S. al-Nazi'at): 42-6,173 Ibn Taymiya

¹⁶⁶The verses read: "As for those who will be wretched (on that day) they will be in the Fire; sighing and wailing will be their portion therein, abiding there so long as the heavens and the earth endure save for that which thy Lord willeth. Lo! thy Lord is Doer of what He will."

¹⁶⁷The verse reads: "And as for those who will be glad (that day) they will be in the Garden, abiding there so long as the heavens and the earth endure save for that which thy Lord willeth: a gift unfailng."

¹⁶⁸ See al-Zamakhshari, al-Kashshaf, 2: 429-30.

¹⁶⁹See Aḥmad ibn 'Abd al-Ḥalīm ibn Taymīya, Majmu'at Tafsir Shaykh al-Islam Ibn Taymiya, ed. 'Abd al-Ṣamad Syaraf al-Dīn (Bombay: Maṭba'at Qāf, 1954).

¹⁷⁰The verse reads: "He [God] will heed who feareth."

¹⁷¹The verse reads: "We are best aware of what they say, and thou (O Muhammad) art in no wise a compeller over them. But warn by the Qur'an him who feareth My threat."

¹⁷²The verses read: "Saying: Lo! of old, when we were with our families, we were ever anxious; But Allah hath been gracious unto us and hath preserved us from the torment of the breath of Fire."

maintains that the word khashya in the Qur'an is meant as referring to fear of God and His punishment.¹⁷⁴ Furthermore, quoting Q. 40 (S. al-Mu'min/Ghāfir): 13,¹⁷⁵ Q. 42 (S. al-Shūrā): 22,¹⁷⁶ and Q. 50 (S. Qāf): 32-4,¹⁷⁷ he points out that perfect khashya can lead someone to repentance (ināba, or tawba) and hope (rajā') of God's blessing.¹⁷⁸ It is very clear, according to Ibn Taymīya, that the elucidation (tafsil) of mujmal (general) verses must depend on the cross-referential approach.

B. Bint al-Shāṭi"s Theory

Despite the usefulness of the cross-referential approach, as we have seen above, few exegetes, according to Bint al-Shāṭi', ever applied it, whether partially or fully (al-isti'māl al-kāmil), or in a such way as to show the textual context (siyāq)

¹⁷³The verses read: "They ask thee of the Hour: when will it come to port? Why (ask they)? What hast thou to tell thereof? Unto thy Lord belongeth (knowledge of) the term thereof. Thou art but a warner unto him who feareth it. On the day when they behold it, it will be as if they had but tarried for an evening or the morn thereof.

¹⁷⁴ Ibn Taymiya, Majmu at, 89.

¹⁷⁵The verse reads: "He it is who showeth you His portents, and sendeth down for you provision from the sky. None payeth heed save him who turneth (unto Him) repentant."

¹⁷⁶The verse reads: "Thou seest the wrong-doers fearful of that which they have earned, and it will surely befall them; while those who believe and do good works (will be) in flowering meadows of the Gardens, having what they wish from their Lord. This is the great preferment."

¹⁷⁷The verses read: "Who feareth the Beneficent in secret and cometh with a contrite heart. Enter it in peace. This is the day of immortality."

¹⁷⁸Ibn Taymiya, Majmu at, 90-1.

of a particular Qur'anic verse. Aware of the hermeneutical problems involved,

Bint al-Shāṭi' states in the introduction to her al-Tafsir al-Bayani the following:

The principle of the method in this Tafsir — as I received it from my teacher [i.e., Amin al-Khūli] — is objective comprehension (altanāwul al-mawḍu'ī). This method is devoted to the study of a single subject matter (al-mawḍu' al-wāhḍd) in the Qur'ān; and hence, all verses in the Qur'ān which speak of the subject are brought together in order that the usual Qur'ānic usages of words and structures — after seeking their original linguistic senses — are understood. This is a method which is different from the method of Qur'ān interpretation known as chapter-by-chapter method, in which a word or a verse is looked at in isolation from its specific textual context (al-siyāq al-khāṣṣ) which is signified by the general textual context (al-siyāq al-'āmm) of its overall Qur'ānic usage. The chapter-by-chapter method is insufficient to understand the Qur'ān's words, or to notice its clear structures and its unique rhetoric. 179

It can be inferred from the above quotation that, according to her, there are three theoretical points that must be taken into consideration in applying the cross-referential method. The first is the lexical meaning of any Qur'anic word. The recognition of the original meaning of a word, of course, can help interpreters to understand its intended meaning (al-ma'na al-murad) in a given textual context. The second point is the involvement of all Qur'anic verses relating to the subject under discussion. This principle means that the Qur'an is given the autonomy to speak for itself on any subject by itself for the sake of an objective interpretation. Bint al-Shāṭi' here echoes Betti's idea. The latter says:

¹⁷⁹ Bint al-Shāṭi', al-Tafsir al-Bayāni, 1: 10, 17-8; and 2: 7; and idem, Kitābunā al-Akbar, 5. In the latter, she says: "It is not allowed to interpret a Qur'ānic word without practicing a perfect induction (istiqrā' kāmil) regarding its usages in the whole Qur'ān, just as it is not admitted to deal with a Qur'ānic topic without serious research on all Qur'ānic verses, and thinking about their specific contexts in one verse or chapter, and their general contexts in the whole Qur'ān." See also Boullata, "Modern Qur'ān Exegesis," 104-5; and Poonawala, "Muḥammad 'Izzat Darwaza's Principles," 244 ff.

Im Lichte dieses Kanons tritt die Wechselbeziehung und Kohärenz hervor, die zwischen den einzelnen Bestandteilen der Rede, wie überhaupt jedweder Bekundung eines Gedachten waltet, sowie ihre gemeinsame Beziehung auf das Ganze, dessen Teile sie bilden: eine Wechsel - und Ganzheitsbeziehung, die eine gegenseitige Sinnerhellung und - Durchleuchtung sinnhaltiger Formen im Verhältnis zwischen dem Ganzen und seinen Bestandteilen und umgekhert ermöglicht.¹⁸⁰

The last point she raises is the awareness of al-siyāq al-khāṣṣ and al-siyāq al-'āmm in attempts at understanding the Qur'ān's words and concepts. This is, in Hirsch's words, due to the fact that "the meaning of any word is determined according to its coexistence with the words that surround it." After all, the signification or meaning of a sentence, according to Betti, can only be understood in reference to the coherence of its context. 182

For Bint al-Shāṭi' there are at least two major hermeneutical advantages to applying the cross-referential method to the Qur'ān. The first is that by means of this method, one will be able to determine the originally intended meaning of the Qur'ānic words (al-ma'ānī al-aṣilā) and the originally intended Qur'ānic principles (al-mabādi' al-Qur'āniya al-aṣilā), so that the involvement of extra-Qur'ānic ¹⁸⁰Betti, Die Hermeneutik als allgemeine Methodik der Geisteswissenschaften (Tübingen: J. C. B. Mohr (Paul Siebeck), 1962), 15. See also idem, Allgemeine Auslegungslehre als Methodik der Geisteswissenschaften (Tübingen: J. C. B. Mohr (Paul Siebeck), 1967), 216-9.

¹⁸¹ Hirsch, Validity, 201.

¹⁸² See Betti, Die Hermeneutik, 15; and idem, Allgemeine, 220.

projections can be avoided.¹⁸³ The concepts of al-ma'āni and al-mabādi' al-aṣīla are what is meant in al-Shāṭibī's use of the terms "murād Allāh" (something that God means by His words),¹⁸⁴ what Betti means by the term "mens dicentis," ¹⁸⁵ and Hirsch by the phrase "verbal meaning." ¹⁸⁶ The last two terms are used in the hermeneutical study of the Bible. The other advantage, according to Bint al-Shāṭi', is that the method can lead someone to understand the rhetorical subtleties of the Qur'ān in which no single word or particle can replace another with the same meaning. ¹⁸⁷

C. Her Application of the Method

Bint al-Shāṭi' employs the cross-referential approach for two purposes: first, in dealing with Qur'anic themes (as seen in such of her works as al-Qur'an ¹⁸³ Bint al-Shāṭi', al-Tafsir al-Bayāni, 1: 17; and idem, al-Qur'an wa Qadaya, 5-8.

¹⁸⁴See al-Shāṭibī, al-Muwafaqat, 3: 254-7. In this passages, al-Shāṭibī acknowledges the literal meaning of the Qur'ān (al-ma'nā al-zāhir), which is linguistic in nature, and its subtle meanings (al-ma'nā al-bāṭin), which constitute what God means by his words (murād Allāh).

¹⁸⁵ Betti says that "meaning-full forms" have to be regarded as autonomous, and hence must be understood in consonance with their own logic of development, their author's intention. See Betti, Die Hermeneutik, 14.

use of linguistic symbols and which can be so conveyed." In other words, it is a "willed type which an author expresses by linguistic symbols and which can be understood by another through those symbols." E. D. Hirsch, Jr., Validity in Interpretation (New Haven and London: Yale University Press, 1967), 49.

¹⁸⁷ See Bint al-Shāṭi', al-Tafsir al-Bayāni, 1: 18.

wa Qaḍāyā al-Insān, al-Shakhṣiya al-Islāmiya, and al-I'jāz al-Bayāni li al-Qur'ān), 188 and second, in searching for the meaning of Qur'ānic words within a given sūra (as seen in her al-Tafsir al-Bayāni li al-Qur'ān). 189 Her approach results in many new hermeneutical findings. Sometimes it helps in detecting the subtle meaning (sirr) of the huruf al-muqaṭṭa'a or in identifying otiose particles in the Qur'ān, topics elaborated in chapter one of this thesis. Other hermeneutical breakthroughs, identified in the studies of Boullata, Jansen, al-Sīd and Amīn, are the notions of the absence of synonymity in the Qur'ān, 190 the emphasis-on-

¹⁸⁸ It can be said that these works represent her thematic exegetical works in the study of the Qur'ān. In her al-Qur'ān wa Qaḍāyā al-Insān, she discusses the Qur'ānic concepts in relation to human beings, such as the human function in the world (khilāfa, and amāna [trust]), human freedoms in terms of belief ('aqīda), reason and reasoning (al-'aql wa al-ra'y), and will (irāda), and human existence in the afterlife (maṣīr al-insān). In her al-Shakhṣiya al-Islāmiya, she elaborates the Islamic personality according to the Qur'ān, focusing on the issues of difference between bashar (human beings) and malā'ika (angels) [also satan], the materiality and spirituality of human beings, the individuality and sociality of human beings, and the problem of the determinism. The last book explores the idea of i'jāz of the Qur'ān.

¹⁸⁹This work, which consists of two volumes, deals with 14 short sūras of the Qur'ān. The first volume is composed of Q. 93 (S. al-Duḥā), Q. 94 (S. al-Sharḥ), Q. 99 (S. al-Zalzala), Q. 100 (S. al-'Adiyāt), Q. 79 (S. al-Nazi'āt), Q. 90 (S. al-Balad), and Q. 102 (S. al-Takāthur), whereas the other Q. 96 (S. al-'Alaq), Q. 68 (S. al-Qalam), Q. 103 (S. al-'Aṣr), Q. 92 (S. al-Layl), Q. 89 (S. al-Fajr), Q. 104 (S. al-Humaza), and Q. 107 (S. al-Ma'ūn).

Synonyms in the Light of Quran," Proceedings of the Twenty-Sixth International Congress of Orientalists (New Delhi: Bhandarkar Oriental Research Institute, 1970). In this work, Bint al-Shāṭi' gives, among others, an example of the words al-ḥalf and al-qasam. In Arabic dictionaries and Qur'ān commentaries, it is said that both have the same meaning, i.e., to swear an oath. However, in Qur'ānic usage it is not so. Unlike the latter, the former is only used to refer to swearing falsely. See also Bint al-Shāṭi', al-l'jāz al-Bayāni, 210-38; and idem, Kitābunā, 7-12. In these books, she mentions the differences between the following pair words in their subtle meanings: al-ru'ya wa al-ḥulm (a dream), ānasa wa abṣara (to see), al-na'y wa al-bu'd (distance), taṣada'a wa taḥaṭṭama (to be shaken), al-khushu' wa al-khuḍu' (humility), al-khashya wa al-khawf (fear), zawj wa imra'a (couple), ashtat wa shatta (various things), al-ins wa al-insān (human being), al-ni'ma wa al-na'im attention-to-the-Resurrection-event function of verbs in the passive voice $(majhu\bar{l})^{191}$ and the spontaneous-obedience-of-the-universe meaning of verbs in forms VII and VIII $(mut\bar{a}wa'a)$. 192

However, the question of whether Bint al-Shāṭi' is consistent in applying this method is one that still requires investigation, and it is this task that we will undertake through a study of her interpretation of Surat al-'Aṣr (Q. 103), as well as of her treatment of the Qur'ānic verses dealing with freedem of belief or religious pluralism (hurriyat al-'aqida). These reflect her use of the method in dealing with the Qur'ānic language and themes.

1. Her interpretation of Surat al-'Aṣr (Q. 103)

Indroducing Sūrat al-'Aṣr, Bint al-Shāṭi' states that it is a Meccan sūra that was revealed immediately after Sūrat al-Inshirāḥ (Q. 94) and just before Sūrat al-'Aāiyāt (Q. 100), i.e., 13th in the chronological order of revelation. Bint al-Shāṭi''s account of the sūra's nuzuī (revelation) conforms therefore to a generally accepted tradition.

⁽pleasure), and al-'aṣr wa al-dahr (time). See also Boullata, "Modern Qur'ān Exegesis," 109-10; idem, "Poetry Citation as Interpretive Illustration in Qur'ān Exegesis: Maṣa'il Naṣī' ibn al-Azraq," in Islamic Studies Presented to Charles J. Adams, ed. Wael B. Hallaq and Donald P. Little (Leiden: E. J. Brill, 1991), 32; and Amīn, "A Study of Bint al-Shāṭi', 86-88.

¹⁹¹See Boullata, "Modern Qur'ān Exegesis," 110.

¹⁹²See Boullata, "Modern Qur'an Exegesis," 110.

¹⁹³Bint al-Shāṭi', al-Tafsir al-Bayani, 2:75.

This sura consists of three verses, and reads (1) Wa l-'aṣri (2) Inna l-insāna la-fī khusrin (3) illā l-ladhīna āmanu wa 'amilu ṣ-ṣāliḥāti wa tawāṣaw bi l-ḥaqqi wa tawāṣaw bi al-ṣabri. Pickthall translates these verses as follows: "By the declining day. Lo! man is in a state of loss save those who believe and do good works, and exhort one another to truth and exhort one another to endurance." Using the cross-referential method, Bint al-Shāṭi' searches for the meaning of nine words appearing in the sūra, i.e., al-'aṣr, al-insān, khusr, amanu, 'amilu, al-ṣāliḥāt, tawāṣaw, al-ḥaqq and al-ṣabr, as we shall see in the following.

a) Verse 1-2: Wa l-'aṣri inna l-insana la-fi khusrin

The original meaning of the word al-'aṣr, Bint al-Shāṭi' states, is al-ḍaghṭ li-stikhlāṣ al-'uṣāra (pressure for the extraction of juice). The phrase 'aṣr al-'inab is a common expression in the Arabic language and means "extraction of the juice of the grape." From this word are derived others, for example, al-mi'ṣara (tool for extraction), al-ma'ṣara (place for extaction), and al-mu'ṣirāt (clouds from which the rain is extracted). 195 The original meaning of the word is found in Q. 12 (S. Yūsuf): 36, 49 where the words a'ṣiru and ya'ṣirūna are used to mean "to press and to extract" wine, and in Q. 78 (S. al-Naba'): 14 where the word al-mu'ṣirāt has ¹⁹⁴ Pickthall, The Meaning, 449.

¹⁹⁵ Bint al-Shāṭi', al-Tafsir al-Bayāni, 2: 75. See also Ḥusayn ibn Muḥammad al-Rāghib al-Iṣfahāni, al-Mufradāt fī Gharib al-Qur'ān, ed. Muḥammad Sayyid Kaylāni (Beirut: Dār al-Ma'rifa, n.d.), 336; Muḥammad ibn Mukarram ibn Manzūr, Lisān al-'Arab al-Muḥiṭ, rearranged by Yūsuf Khayyāṭ (Beirut: Dār al-Jīl and Dār Lisān al-'Arab, 1988), the sense of "clouds." In all these examples there is an original meaning that links these words, namely "pressure" (al-daght).1% On this basis, Bint al-Shāṭi' interprets the word al-'aṣr in Surat al-'Aṣr as referring to "time" in the sense that time presses human beings with trials (tajribāt) and troubles (mu'ānāt), their reactions to which are examined in terms of goodness (khayr) or badness (sharr).197 This is a very good example of how the original meaning of a word is used by Bint al-Shāṭi' in interpreting its Qur'ānic usage. On the other hand, however, the question arises: How or why does Bint al-Shāṭi' relate the "pressure" of time to tajrībāt, mu'ānāt, khayr and sharr? The answer to this question and others which involve the interrelation between words having the same context will be sought later in my analysis of her interpretation of this sura.

In the case of the qasam (oath) using the particle wāw, Bint al-Shāṭi' is consistent in maintaining that here it is not understood to mean the glorification (ta'zim) of al-muqsam bihi (the word by which the oath is made), as al-Zamakhshari, ¹⁹⁸ and al-Rāzi¹⁹⁹ insist. It is rather meant to draw attention to an apparent natural phenomenon, that is to say, the affliction of human beings by time ('aṣr), preparing the audience to receive the abstract ideas of khusr

^{4: 794;} and Neal Robinson, Discovering the Qur'an: A Contemporary Approach to a Veiled Text (London: SCM Press Ltd., 1996), 163.

¹⁹⁶Bint al-Shāṭi', al-Tafsir al-Bayani, 2: 75-6.

¹⁹⁷Bint al-Shāṭi', al-Tafsir al-Bayani, 2: 75, 77, and 80.

¹⁹⁸See al-Zamakhshari, al-Kashshaf, 4: 794.

¹⁹⁹See al-Rāzī, al-Tafsīr al-Kabīr, 32: 85.

(damage) and najā (safety) for human beings in accordance with their responsibilities (mas'uliyāt al-insān).200

Bint al-Shāṭi"s understanding of the gasam is criticized by Tawfiq in his article "Interpretation and Lessons of Surah 'al-Duhā'." Tawfiq reproaches Bint al-Shāti' for "taking for granted" the idea of perceptible matters in the qasam, when in fact not every qasam refers to such things.201 Using the inductive method, he argues that the qasam occurs in the Qur'an 40 times. In 13 places it appears at the beginning of Meccan suras. In six of the 13 the muqsam bihi represents natural phenomena, such as the night (al-layl), the sun (al-shams), and the dawn (al-fajr), while the remainding ones deal with "less or non-perceptible" matters, as in al-Saffat, al-Mursalat, and al-Nazi'at. The other kinds of al-muqsam bihi constitute "God's grace" (Q. 93: 4, Q. 36: 1-6, Q. 19: 68-72, Q. 12: 93-8, Q. 12: 93-8, Q. 12: 88-92, and Q. 12 58-76), "divine support" (Q. 93:1-5, Q. 12: 77-87 and Q. 12: 58-76), "the prophet, the present day and the hereafter" (Q. 12: 88-92, Q. 10: 52-4, and Q. 4: 62-3), "miraculous signs" (Q. 95: 1-6, Q. 92: 1-11. Q. 68: 1-6, Q. 51: 20-3, and Q. 34: 3-4), and "ethics" (Q. 92: 1-11, Q. 75: 1-6, Q. 52: 1-13, Q. 50: 1-5, Q. 34: 3-5, Q. 19: 68-72, Q. 16: 63, and Q. 10: 52-4). From this observation, Tawfig concludes that the purpose of all instances of the qasam in the Qur'an is to indicate "a significant feature that is the existence of God's grace and His support together with the oath whether it is with the name of Allāh as in 12: 73, or with one of His created signs as in 93: 1-2."202 It is very clear that Tawfiq's position is one of support for the classical idea of ta'zim (glorification) in the qasam structure.

²⁰⁰Bint al-Shāṭi', al-Tafsir al-Bayani, 2: 80; and idem, al-I'jaz al-Bayani, 251.

²⁰¹Tawfiq, "Interpretation and Lessons," 16.

Nevertheless, Tawfiq's criticism seems unsound, and this for at least two reasons. First, he over-simplifies Bint al-Shati's position on the gasam. He asserts that Bint al-Shāti' sees all the qasams in the Qur'an as departing from the original meaning of the concept, i.e., the ta'zim (glorification) of the mugsam bihi and the ta'kid (affirmation) of the jawab al-gasam (the main clause of gasam structure), and instead taking on a rethorical meaning (al-ma'na al-balaghi), i.e., drawing attention to a manifest phenomenon in order to introduce an abstract concept. This reduction of Bint al-Shāṭi"s position, however, is inaccurate. In her al-I'jāz al-Bayani, she points to the bipartite division of the meaning of the gasam using the particle waw. The first is the gasam which is understood to mean both ta'kid and ta'zim. This kind occurs in gasams in conjunction with the words Allah and rabb in Q. 6 (S. al-An'am): 23 and 30, which speak of the oath of the mushrikun (polytheists) in the hearafter. It also occurs in God's oaths sworn on His own name in Q. 51 (S. al-Dhāriyāt): 23, Q. 15 (S. al-Ḥijr): 92, Q. 4 (S. al-Nisā'): 65, and the Prophet's oath by God in Q.10 (S. Yunus): 53. The second kind is the qasam that is not meant as ta'zim and ta'kid. It draws attention rather to the rhetorical meaning of words, as can be seen in Q. 68 (S. al-Qalam): 1, Q. 79 (S. al-Nāzi'āt): 1-5, Q. 89 (S. al-Fajr): 1-3, Q. 92 (S. al-Layl): 1-2, Q. 93 (S. al-Duḥā): 1-2, Q. 100 (S. al-

²⁰²Tawfiq, "Interpretation and Lessons," 16.

'Adiyat): 1-3, and Q. 103 (S. al-'Asr): 1. The purpose of the qasam in these verses is to focus a reader's attention on perceptible phenomena (hissiyat mudraka) as an illustrative introduction to a rhetorical explanation (bayan ma'nawi) of abstract phenomena.203 Tawfiq's claim that certain words, such as al-nāzi'āt, al-nāshiṭāṭ, alsābihāt, al-sābiqāt, and al-mudabbirāt in Q. 79 (S. al-Nāzi'āt): 1-5, have "less or imperceptible" meaning, is not proven right. The words al-nazi'at and so on are interpreted variously by exegetes. The best-known definitions, according to al-Zamakhshari and Bint al-Shāti', are that they refer to the angels who are disposed to draw human souls out of their bodies (al-malak al-ladhi yanzi'u alarwah), the stars in the sky (al-nujum), and war horses (khayl al-ghuzat).204 Of these three interpretations, besides others, only angels are imperceptible. In addition, the qasam structure of Q. 79: 1-5 is the same as those in, for instance, Q. 93 (S. al-Duhā): 1-2, Q. 100 (S. al-'Adiyāt): 1-3 and Q. 103 (S. al-'Aṣr): 1, where the perceptible meaning of the muqsam bihi is very clear. That is why Bint al-Shāṭi' prefers to interpret the the words al-nazi'at and so forth as referring to "horses," and not "angels." One can say that Bint al-Shāti"s bipartate division results from her application of the cross-referential method to the qasam verses because it takes into consideration the specific structural features of the qasam and the textual context of its use.

²⁰³See Bint al-Shāṭi', al-I'jāz al-Bayāni, 244-52. See also Bint al-Shāṭi', al-Tafsīr al-Bayāni, 1: 25, 103, 124; and 2: 43-4, 80, 100, 132; Boullata, "Modern Qur'ān Exegesis," 111; Jansen, The Interpretation of the Koran, 70; Kenneth Cragg, The Mind of the Qur'ān, 72; Amīn, "A Study of Bint al-Shāṭi''s Exegesis," 48-54; and Lamya Kandil, "Die Schwüre in den Mekkanischen Suren," in The Qur'ān as Text, 41-57.

²⁰⁴Al-Zamakhshari, al-Kashshaf, 4: 692-3; and Bint al-Shāṭi', al-Tafsir al-Bayani, 1: 123-4.

The other weakness of Tawfig's criticism lies in his argument. Rejecting Bint al-Shāṭi''s opinion, he tries to show that all gasams in the Qur'an are intended to point to "the existence of God's grace and His support." However, he misses the significance of the specific textual context of those verses and the relationship between the qasam and jawab al-gasam therein, which, according to Bint al-Shati', play a role in determining the different meanings of the qasam. Tawfiq does not notice the difference, for example, between the Prophet's oath by God in Q. 10 (S. Yūnus): 53 and God's oath by His creatures, as in Q. 103 (S. al-'Asr): 1-3. Q. 10: 53 tells us that the Prophet was asked by unbelievers whether 'adhab al-khuld (the enduring punishment for wrong-doers in the hereafter) is true or not, and he answered that question by using the qasam to glorify God and to affirm that the 'adhab is true. However, the glorification and affirmation are not found in the qasam in Q. 103: 1 in which God swears by al-'asr (time) when mentioning the idea of khusr (lit. loss). Here God needs neither to glorify time, because God is the Most Glorious, nor to affirm through the qasam His message, because God never lies. In other words, there is another dimension to this qasam and others like it. This other dimension, according to Bint al-Shāṭi', is rhetorical emphasis, as mentioned earlier.

²⁰⁵See Bint al-Shāṭi', al-Tafsir al-Bayāni, 1: 124-30

The word insān has the same root, i.e. '-n-s, as the words ins and nās. The root '-n-s suggests the lexical meaning of 'intimacy' as opposed to w-h-sh, which suggests 'loneliness'.²⁰⁶ A human being is called insān or ins, and nās (in the collective), because, as al-Rāghib al-Iṣfahānī states in his al-Mufradāt fī Gharīb al-Qur'ān, human beings are intimate with one another in society (al-jamā'a).²⁰⁷

Nevertheless, apart from their shared meaning, according to Bint al-Shāṭi', the three words al-nās, al-ins and al-insān have their own specific connotations in Qur'ānic usage.²⁰⁸ The word al-nās appears in the Qur'ān 240 times, conveying a clear indication of the human species in general (dalālat ism al-jins al-muṭlaq).²⁰⁹ Q. 49 (S. al-Ḥujurāt): 13, Q. 13 (S. al-Ra'd): 17 and Q. 59 (S. al-Ḥashr): 21 represent examples of this. The term al-ins, which occurs 18 times in the Qur'ān, is always associated with the word al-jinn by way of contrast ('ala wajh al-taqābul). For Bint al-Shāṭi', this indicates that the human species is different from that of the jinn in the sense that unlike the latter, the former is intimate (anis), not wild (ghayr mutawaḥḥish), and that furthermore it is visible (ghayr khāṭin). This indication is called its dalālat al-insīya.²¹⁰ The word al-insān in the Qur'ān points not only to an individual representative of the human species, but also to what Bint al-Shāṭi'

²⁰⁶See Ibn Manzūr, Lisan al-'Arab, 1: 112.

²⁰⁷Al-Rāghib al-Iṣfahāni, al-Mufradāt, 28.

²⁰⁸Bint al-Shāṭi', al-Tafsir al-Bayāni, 2: 81.

²⁰⁹Bint al-Shāṭi', al-Qur'ān wa Qaḍāyā, 17; and idem, al-Tafsir al-Bayāni, 2: 81.

²¹⁰Bint al-Shāṭi', al-Qur'ān wa Qaḍāya, 18; and idem, al-Tafsir al-Bayāni, 2:

calls dalālat al-insāniya (indication of humanity). The word is mentioned in 65 verses. All of these verses deal with humanity's qualification (ahliyat al-insān) to bear taba'āt al-taklīf (responsibilities) and amāna (trust), and to receive 'ilm (knowledge) and 'aql (intellect) as the khalīfat Allāh (God's deputy) in the world.²¹¹ More specifically, the word al-insān in the context of Q. 103: 2 conveys the sense of mankind's qualification to carry individual and social responsibilities (mas'ūlīyat al-insān al-fardīya wa al-ijtimā'īya).²¹²

The word khusr, etymologically speaking, is the antonym of ribh (profit). It is used to signify material loss in a business deal. In the religious field, it is understood to mean "al-ḍalal 'an al-ḥaqq" (going astray from the true path). In the Qur'an the word and its derivations appear 64 times with various meanings. In three places, i.e., Q. 26 (S. al-Shu'ara'): 181, Q 55 (S. al-Raḥmān): 9, and Q. 83 (S. al-Muṭaffifin): 3, the words al-mukhsirin, tukhsiru and yukhsiruna (all in the fourth form) occur, conveying the meaning of material loss in a business deal, i.e., "causing a loss." The word al-khāsirun emerges in Q. 5 (S. al-Ma'ida): 30 and Q. 12 (S. Yusuf): 14 to indicate the meaning of abstract loss (al-khusr al-ma'nawi). The final sense, appearing in various forms, conveys its religious (technical) meaning in the context of warning kāfīrun (unbelievers), mushrikun (polytheists), ²¹¹Bint al-Shāṭi', al-Qur'an wa Qaḍaya, 20-5; and idem, al-Tafsir al-Bayani, 2: 82.

²¹²Bint al-Shāṭi', al-Tafsir al-Bayani, 2: 82.

²¹³See al-Rāghib al-Iṣfahāni, al-Mufradat, 147-8; and Ibn Manzūr, Lisan al-'Arab, 2: 829-30.

munāfiqun (hypocrites) and the like, who deserve punishment in the hereafter.²¹⁴
Considering the specific textual context, Bint al-Shāṭi' maintains that the word khusr should be understood to mean "going astray from the right way" amounting to turning away from taba'āt al-taklīf (religious duties) and mas'ulīyat al-insān (human responsibilities) in the world.

b) Verse 3: Illa l-ladhina amanu wa 'amilu al-ṣaliḥati wa-tawaṣaw bi l-ḥaqqi wa-tawaṣaw bi al-ṣabri

Bint al-Shāṭi' brings up two major points in relation to this verse: the relation between belief (imān) and good works (al-a'māl al-ṣāliḥa), and the meaning of the words tawāṣaw, al-ḥaqq and al-ṣabr. Prior to the discussion of these matters, however, she explains that the verses contain the message that every human being (al-insān) has his/her individual responsibility, that is to say, belief in God and the performance of good works, as well as the collective responsibility to recommend to one another truth and patience.²¹⁵

For evidence on the relation between belief and good works, Bint al-Shāṭi' searches the Qur'ān for passages where they are associated. She finds this to be the case in 75 verses containing references to divine promise (al-wa'd) and threat (al-wa'id). In several of these, i.e., Q. 4 (S. al-Nisa'): 69, Q. 12 (S. Yūsuf): 101, Q. 21 (S. al-Anbiya'): 72, 86, Q. 26 (S. al-Shu'ara'): 83, and Q. 27 (S. al-Naml): 19, good ²¹⁴Bint al-Shāṭi', al-Tafsir al-Bayani, 2: 82-4.

²¹⁵Bint al-Shāṭi', al-Tafsir al-Bayāni, 2: 86.

works are attributed to the prophets. Q. (S. al-Kahf): 110 relates the obligation of al-'amal al-ṣaliḥ in forbidding polytheism. Another phenomenon is that Q. 41 (S. al-Rūm): 44 contrasts al-'amal al-ṣaliḥ with kufr (unbelief). The above examples, she infers, indicate that al-'amal al-ṣaliḥ is connected to iman. Accordingly, the underlying message of the phrase of amanu wa 'amilu al-ṣalihat in Q. 103: 3 is that belief in God should be associated with doing good works in order that human beings be saved from khusr.²¹⁶

The word tawaṣā is a verb derived from the root w-ṣ-y which originally conveys the sense of "strength of relation" (quwwat al-irtibāṭ wa al-ittiṣāl).²¹⁷ Based on this meaning such statement as, for example: waṣat al-arḍu, meaning "plants of the earth are connected to each other," or awṣā al-rajulu bi-shay'in, meaning "to entrust something to someone," are formed.²¹⁸

The words that have the above root appear in the Qur'an in a number of variant forms. The words waṣṣā and awṣā occur 12 times in the context where God entrusts His divine teachings to His messengers and true believers. The form tawāsā eppears 5 times. One of them is to be found in Q. 51 (S. al-Dhāriyāt): 53 in the context of al-istifhām al-inkārī (the negative question) for the purpose of rejecting the idea that previous prophets had recommended (tawāṣaw) to their followers to deny (takdhib̄) the Prophet Muḥammad. The other instances occur in ²¹⁶Bint al-Shāṭi', al-Tafsir al-Bayani, 2: 86-7.

²¹⁷See al-Rāghib al-Işfahānī, al-Mufradat, 525.

Q. 103: 3 and Q. 90 (S. al-Balad): 17, where this form of the word conveys the meaning of the reciprocal recommendation of upholding al-ḥaqq (truth), al-ṣabr (human inner strength or fortitude), and al-marḥama (mercy), which, according to Bint al-Shāṭi', represents a collective human duty (mas'uliyat al-insān 'an al-jamā'a).²¹⁹

Bint al-Shāṭi' says that the word al-ḥaqq is used in the Qur'ān 227 times in various technical senses, for instance, as "the opposite of bāṭil (falsehood), a divine name (the Truth), religion, God's promise, God's speech, and a portion which should be returned to its owner."²²⁰ Of these meanings, it is as the opposite of al-bāṭil, that, according to her, the word al-ḥaqq functions in Q. 103: 3.²²¹ It might be that she prefers this meaning and not the other, because she believes there is a connection between the word al-ḥaqq and the word preceding it, i.e., tawāṣaw, which requires the practical human implementation of truth.

The last term that Bint al-Shāṭi' discusses in this verse is al-ṣabr. This word, which essentially means "al-ḥabs" (the act of holding or keeping back),²²² is understood to mean "human inner strength or patience in every subject on which God reveals His instructions." In what aspects is ṣabr related to other ²¹⁸See Ibn Manzūr, Lisān al-'Arab, 6: 938-9.

²¹⁹Bint al-Shāṭi', al-Tafsir al-Bayāni, 2: 89-90.

²²⁰Bint al-Shāṭi', al-Tafsir al-Bayani, 2: 89.

²²¹Bint al-Shāṭi', al-Tafsir al-Bayani, 2: 88.

²²²See al-Rāghib al-Iṣfahānī, al-Mufradāt, 273; and Ibn Manzūr, Lisān al-'Arab, 3: 403.

terms? The Qur'ān uses the word in various contexts. In about 20 verses the Prophet is told to be patient in carrying all burdens relating to his mission. Q. 3 (S. Al̄ 'Imrān): 200 and Q. 8 (S. al-Anfāl): 46 relate it to jihād, where in Q. 2 (S. al-Baqara): 155, 177 and Q. (S. al-Ḥajj): 35 it occurs in relation to the afflictions (ibtilā') and disasters (muṣībāt) that burden human beings.²²³ All of the above aspects, according to her, are at play here in Q. 103: 3. She says: "The silence of Q. 103: 3 — as well as Q. 90: 17 — with regard to mentioning the aspects related to ṣabr indicates the al-iṭlāq wa al-ta'mīm (generalization) of what the Qur'ān [i.e. other verses] mentions elsewhere, namely patience in regard to the consequences of belief, life's afflictions, disasters, and jihād."²²⁴

As far as the study of Bint al-Shāṭi''s interpretation of Q. 103 is concerned, one can say that she is successful in showing the correlation between the etymological meaning of a Qur'ānic word, its meaning in the general textual context (al-siyāq al-'āmm), and its meaning in the specific textual context (al-siyāq al-khāṣṣ). In her hermeneutical exercise, it may be observed that the etymological meaning of a word is specified by al-siyāq al-'āmm of the whole Qur'ān. Furthermore, the meaning which is derived from al-siyāq al-'āmm is designated by al-siyāq al-khāṣṣ, such as in Q. 103 where every word has its own specific function in determining the meanings of the words sorounding it. For example, Bint al-Shāṭi' determines the word al-'aṣr with tajrībāt, mu'ānāt, khayr and sharr, and designates the meaning of the word khusr to be that of "turning away from taba'āt al-taklif", due to the fact that the words al-'asr and khusr here are associated with the word insan which conveys the sense of "responsibility." Likewise, the meaning of al-insan in this passage is qualified by the meaning of the clause illa al-ladhina amanu wa 'amilu al-salihati wa tawasaw bi al-haggi wa tawaṣaw bi al-ṣabri. Again, she determines that the word al-hagg means the opposite of al-baţil in consideration of its relation to the word tawaṣaw. This is consonant with what Betti state: "The significance, intensity, and nuance of a word can only be compherended in relation to the meaning-context in which it was uttered, so that the significance and sense of a sentence, and the sentence connected with it, can only be understood in relation to the reciprocal coherence of meaning-context, and the organic composition and conclusiveness of speech."225 What is more, the possibility that the specific meaning of every word is determined by its specific textual context lends credence to Bint al-Shāṭi"s position that there is no synonymity even between instances of the same word. In conclusion, it can be said that as far as her interpretation of the sura is concerned, Bint al-Shāti' is loyal to the cross-referential method she develops. Between her theory and its application there is certainly coherence.

²²³Bint al-Shāṭi', al-Tafsir al-Bayāni, 2: 91-2.

²²⁴Bint al-Shāṭi', al-Tafsir al-Bayani, 2: 92.

²²⁵Betti, Die Hermeneutik, 16. See also Nikunja Vihari Banerjee, Language, Meaning and Persons (London: George Allen & Unwin Ltd, 1963), 117.

2. The case of hurrivat al-'aqida

The problem of religious pluralism represents another interesting subject for discussion, due to the fact that religious fanaticism and sectarian clashes in the name of religion are an unpleasant fact in the history of all faiths, and have cost the lives of so many human beings. 226 In addition, the issue of pluralism is now part of the mainstream of modern religous thought. Bint al-Shāṭi' is one of those who have made a significant contribution to this discussion, in view of what she says about the Qur'ān's position on freedom of belief and religious pluralism. In terms of the discussion of her exegetical method, we will see whether or not she is consistent throughout in her application of the cross-referential method.

In her al-Qur'an wa Qaḍaya al-Insan Bint al-Shāṭi' collects the Qur'anic verses which are, according to her, related to the above issue. First of all, basing that the conflict beween Jews and Muslims in the modern era is due to religious fanaticism. See David K. Shipler, Arab and Jews: Wounded Spirits in a Promised Land (New York: Times Books, 1986), 138-77. Hudson and Rejwan, on the other hand, maintain that the main factor for the emergence of civil war of 1975-76 in Lebanon beween Maronite Catholics and Muslims, for example, was political or enomomic, not religious. For detailed information about this, see Michael C. Hudson, Arab Politics: the Search for Legitmacy (New Haven and London: Yale University Press, 1977), 56-81, especially 79; and Nissim Rejwan, Arabs Face the Modern World: Religious, Cultural, and Political Responses to the West (Gainesville: University Press of Florida, 1998), 213-21. However, it is very possible, as Yaron Harel concludes, that when political or economic conflicts occur, people use religious identity as a means to suport their political interest. See Yaron Harel, "Jewish-Christian Relations in Aleppo as Background for the Jewish Response to the Events of October 1850," International Journal of Middle East Studies 30, 1, (1998): 77-96.

herself on Q. 10 (S. Yūnus): 99,²²⁷ which is a Meccan verse, and Q. 2 (S. al-Baqara): 256,²²⁸ which is an early Medinan verse, she maintains that the Prophet Muḥammad whose task was merely to inform people of the divine revelation (see Q. 3: 20, Q. 5: 92, Q. 16: 35, and Q. 42: 48) and to argue in the best way against those who doubted it (see Q. 16: 125),²²⁹ was not allowed to force others to adhere to the religion of Islam. This was in order to emphasize that every human being bears responsibility (ḥaml al-amāna) for his or her choice, and that faith ('aqīda) must result from conviction (i'tiqād), belief (īmān) from hearty satisfaction (ridā) and confidence (tuma'nīna) in recieving the truth.²³⁰

This principle is, according to Bint al-Shāṭi', related to the positive attitude of Islam towards other religions, such as Judaism and Christianity. Quoting Q. 2 (S. al-Baqara): 91,²³¹ 97,²³² Q. 3 (S. Al̄ 'Imrān): 3-4,²³³ Q. 4 (S. al-Nisā'): 46,²³⁴ Q. 5 (S.

²²⁷The verse (verse 100 in Pickthall's) reads: "If thy Lord willed, all who are in the earth would have believed together. Wouldst thou (Muhammad) compel men until they are believers?"

²²⁸The verse reads: "There is no compulsion in religion. The right direction is henceforth distinct from error..."

²²⁹Bint al-Shāṭi', al-Qur'an wa Qaḍaya, 97-8.

²³⁰Bint al-Shāṭi', al-Qur'an wa Qaḍaya, 95-6. Cf. Boullata, "Fa-stabiqu' 'l-khayrat: A Qur'anic Principle of Interfaith Relations, in Christian-Muslim Encounters, ed. Yvonne Yazbeck Haddad and Wadi Z. Haddad (Gainesville: University Press of Florida, 1995), 43. In support of the Islamic principle of religious pluralism and tolerance, Boullata quotes four other verses, i.e. Q. 5: 48, Q. 11: 118, Q. 16: 93, and Q. 42: 8. Similarly, Wael B. Hallaq supports this idea by showing that "the Qur'an considered the Jews and Christians as possessors of their own respective divine laws, and as bound by the application of these laws." See his A History of Islamic Legal Theories (Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 1997), 4-5.

²³¹The verse reads: "And when it is said unto them: Believe in that which Allah hath revealed, they say: We believe in that which was revealed unto us. And they al-Ma⁷ida): 46,²³⁵ Q. 35 (S. Fāṭir): 31,²³⁶ and Q. 46 (S. al-Aḥqāf): 30,²³⁷ she concludes that Islam not only acknowledges the freedom of religious faith for all people, but also encourages Muslims to confirm the religion and belief for which all previous prophets were sent.²³⁸ The Qur'ānic message inferred from Q. 2 (S. al-Baqara): 136,²³⁹ 285,²⁴⁰ Q. 3 (S. Al̄ 'Imrān): 64,²⁴¹ 70,²⁴² 71,²⁴³ Q. 4 (S. al-Nisā'): 150,²⁴⁴ disbelieve in that which cometh after it, though it is the truth confirming that which they possess. Say (unto them, O Muhammad): Why then slew ye the Prophets of Allah aforetime, if ye are (indeed) believers?"

²³²The verse reads: "Say (O Muhammad, to mankind): Who is an enemy to Gabriel! For he it is who hath revealed (this Scripture) to thy heart by Allah's leave, confirming that which was (revealed) before it, and a guidance and glad tidings to believers."

²³³The verses read: "He hath revealed unto thee (Muhammad) the Scripture with truth, confirming that which was (revealed) before it, even as He revealed the Torah and the Gospel aforetime, for a guidance to mankind; and hath revealed the Criterion (of right and wrong). Lo! those who disbelieve the revelations of Allah, theirs will be a heavy doom. Allah is Mighty, Able to Requite (the wrong)."

²³⁴The verse (verse 47 in Pickthall's) reads: "O ye unto whom the Sripture hath been given! Believe in what We have revealed confirming that which ye possess, before We destroy countenances so as to confound them, or curse them as We cursed the Sabbathbreakers (of old time). The Commandment of Allah is always executed."

²³⁵The verse reads: "And We caused Jesus, son of Mary, to follow in their footsteps, confirming that which was (revealed) before him, and We bestowed on him the Gospel wherein is guidance and a light, confirming that which was (revealed) before it in the Torah — a guidance and an admonition unto those who ward off (evil)."

²³⁶The verse reads: "As for that which We inspire in thee of the Scripture, it is the Truth confirming that which was (revealed) before it. Lo! Allah is indeed Observer, Seer of His slaves."

²³⁷The verse reads: "They said: O our people! Lo! we have heard a Scripture which hath been revealed after Moses, confirming that which was before it, guiding unto the truth and a right road."

²³⁸Bint al-Shāti', al-Qur'an wa Qadaya, 99.

²³⁹The verse reads: "Say (O Muslims): We believe in Allah and that which is revealed unto us and that which was revealed unto Abraham, and Ishmael, and Isaac,

150,²⁴⁴ Q. 29 (S. al-'Ankabūt): 46,²⁴⁵ Q. 41 (S. Fuṣṣilat): 43,²⁴⁶ and Q. 42 (S. al-Shūrā): 13²⁴⁷ even points to the unity of revealed religion. Although this idea is difficult to achieve in reality, human beings, she suggests, should try to implement it in order to be able to avoid hatred and fanaticism.²⁴⁸ She also argues that the word and Jacob, and the tribes, and that which Moses and Jesus received from their Lord. We make no distinction between any of them, and unto Him we have surrendered."

²⁴⁰The verse reads: "The messenger believeth in that which hath been revealed unto him from his Lord and (so do) the believers. Each one believeth in Allah and His angels and His Scriptures and His messengers — We make no distinction between any of His messengers — and they say; "We hear and we obey. (Grant us) Thy forgiveness, our Lord. Unto thee is the journeying."

²⁴¹The verse reads: "Say: O people of the Scripture! Come to an agreement between us and you; that we shall worship none but Allah, and that we shall ascribe no partner unto Him, and that none of us shall take others for lords beside Allah. And if they turn away, then say: Bear witness that we are they who have surrendered (unto Him)."

²⁴²The verse reads: "O people of the Scripture! Why disbelieve ye in the revelations of Allah, when ye (yourselves) bear witness (to their truth)?"

²⁴³The verse reads: "O people of the Scripture! Why confound ye truth with falsehood and knowingly conceal the truth?"

²⁴⁴The verse reads: "Lo! those who disbelieve in Allah and His messengers, and seek to make distinction between Allah and His messenger, and say: We believe in some and disbelieve in others, and seek to choose a way in between."

²⁴⁵The verse reads: "And argue not with the People of the Scripture unless it be in (a way) that is better, save with such of them as do wrong; and say: We believe in that which hath been revealed unto us and revealed unto you; and our God and your God is one, and unto Him we surrender."

²⁴⁶The verse reads: "Naught is said unto thee (Muhammad) save what was said unto the messengers before thee. Lo! thy Lord is owner of forgiveness, and owner (also) of dire punishment."

²⁴⁷The verse reads: "He hath ordained for you that religion which He commended unto Noah, and that which We inspire in thee (Muhammad), and that which We commended unto Abraham and moses and Jesus, saying: Establish the religion, and be not divided therein...."

din (religion) always appears in the Qur'an in its singular form, and never in its plural. Still, regarding the notion of freedom of belief, she maintains that Islam allows holy war merely in order to protect that freedom,²⁴⁹ as stated in Q. 8 (S. al-Anfal): 61,²⁵⁰ Q. 22 (S. al-Hajj): 39,²⁵¹ and Q. 60 (S. al-Mumtaḥana): 8-9.²⁵²

Nevertheless, Bint al-Shāṭi"s treatment of the Qur'anic verses dealing with the issue of religious pluralism is somewhat unconvincing, for she in fact fails to apply the cross-referential method in a consistent fashion, a fault that she criticizes in other exegetes. She neglects moreover to explain or even quote the few Qur'anic verses that are understood by some exegetes to reject religious pluralism. These verses are Q. 3 (S. Al 'Imrān): 19, which reads: "Inna l-dīna 'inda l-lāhi l-islāmu wa mā-khtalafa l-ladhīna utu l-kitāba illā min ba'di mā jā'ahumu l-'ilmu baghyan baynahum wa man yakfur bi-āyāti l-lāhi fa-inna l-lāha sarī'u l-ḥisābi," and ²⁴⁸Bint al-Shāṭi', al-Qur'an wa Qaḍaya, 100-2.

²⁴⁹Bint al-Shāṭi', al-Qur'ān wa Qaḍāyā, 102-3

of (armed) force and horses tethered, that thereby ye may dismay the enemy of Allah and your enemy, and others beside them whom ye know not. Allah knoweth them. Whatsoever ye spend in the way of Allah it will be repaid to you in full, and ye will not be wronged."

²⁵¹The verse reads: "Sanction is given unto those who fight because they have been wronged; and Allah is indeed Able to give them victory."

on account of religion and drove you not out from your homes, that you should show them kindness and deal justly with them. Lo! Allah loveth the just dealers. Allah forbiddeth you only those who warred against you on account of religion and have driven you out from your homes and helped to drive you out, that ye make friends of them. Whosoever maketh friends of them — (All) such are wrong-doers."

verse 85 from the same sura, which states: "Wa man yabtaghi ghayra l-islāmi dinan fa lan yuqbala minhu wa huwa fi l-ākhirati mina l-khāsirina."

It seems that her silence with respect to these two verses is due to the fact that she is afraid of being accused of self-contradiction. When dealing with the word al- $di\bar{n}$ in Q. 107 (S. al- $Ma^{\bar{i}}u\bar{n}$): 1, she says: "It is common (in the Qur' \bar{a} n) that the word be used in reference to religion in general, and to the religion of Islam in a specific way."²⁵³ To support her statement, she then quotes four verses, two of which are Q. 3: 19 and 85. It can be inferred from her words that, according to her, the meaning of Q. 3: 19 is that the true religion is the religion of Islam, and that Q. 3: 85 intends to say that other religions are not accepted by God. This opposition to religious pluralism was also maintained by two classical exegetes, i.e., Ibn Kath \bar{i} r and al-R $\bar{a}z\bar{i}$. Commenting on Q. 3: 19, the former says:

There is an assertion by God that there is no other religion with Him which He would accept from anyone except Islam. Islam means following the messengers of God in that which He sent them at all times until the coming of Muḥammad, the 'seal of the messengers'. Thereafter God closed all other ways (leading) to Him except the way through Muḥammad.²⁵⁴

Likewise, al-Rāzī understands Q. 3: 85 to mean that God declared that the only true religion is Islam, and that no other religion will be accepted by God.²⁵⁵ A further complication is that, in spite of her insistence that the Qur'ān favors ²⁵³Bint al-Shāṭi', al-Tafsir al-Bayāni, 2: 184.

²⁵⁴Ibn Kathir, Tafsir, 1: 362, and 387. See also Mahmoud M. Ayoub, The Qur'an and Its Interpreters (Albany: State University of New York Press, 1992), 2:66.

²⁵⁵Al-Rāzī, al-Tafsīr al-Kabīr, 7: 207, and 8: 135. See also Ayoub, the Qur'an, 2: 242.

religious pluralism, she declares on at least one other occasion that Islam, according to the Qur'an, is the only true religion.²⁵⁶

Bint al-Shāṭi"s self-contradiction in this case is due in part to her misapplication of the cross-referential method that she develops. Had she searched for the meaning of the term islām and its various forms throughout the Qur'ān, taking into consideration their textual context (siyāq), she would have solved her own methodological problem. The word islām and its derivations, i.e., aslama (al-fi'l al-madī, yuslimu (al-fi'l al-mudāri'), aslim (fi'l al-amr) and muslim (ism al-fā'il), appear in the Qur'ān seventy-three times, 257 in most of which cases there is no intention of referring to the religion itself; it rather refers to total submission and belief in the oneness of God, belief in all the prophets and doing good works with ikhlāṣ (sincere devotion). For example, the Qur'ānic verses which indicate these points are:

- a. Q. 2 (S. al-Baqara): 131, saying: "When his Lord said unto him (Abraham): Surrender [aslim)! he said: I have surrendered (aslamtu) to the Lord of the Worlds";
- b. Q. 22 (S. al-Ḥajj): 34, saying: "And for every notion have We appointed a ritual, that they may mention in the name of Allah over the beast of cattle that He hath given them for food; and your God is one God, therefore surrender [aslimu] unto Him, and give good tidings (O Muhammad) to the humble";
- c. Q. 3 (S. Al 'Imran): 18-9, saying: "Allah (Himself) is witness that there is no God save Him, and the angels and the men of learning (too are witness), maintaining His creation in justice, there is no ²⁵⁶See Bint al-Shāṭi', al-Tafsir al-Bayani, 2: 184.

²⁵⁷See Muḥammad Fu'ād 'Abd al-Bāqi, al-Mu'jam al-Mufahras li alfāz al-Qur'ān al-Karīm (Cairo: Maṭaba'at Dār al-Kutub al-Miṣriya, 1954), 355-7.

God save Him, the Almighty, the Wise. Lo! religion with Allah (is) the Surrender [al-islām] (to His will and guidance) ..."; and d. Q. 31 (S. Luqmān): 22, saying: "Whosoever surrendereth [yuslim] his purpose to Allah while doing good, he verily hath grasped the firm hand-hold. Unto Allah belongeth the sequel of all things."

On this basis, many exegetes, among them al-Zamakhshari,²⁵⁸ 'Abduh²⁵⁹ and Sayyid Quṭb,²⁶⁰ choose not to interpret the word islām in Q. 3: 19, and 85 as referring to the name of a particular religion. 'Abduh, for example, says:

Indeed, the restriction (haṣr) in God's statement: Inna al-dina 'inda l-lāhi l-islāmu, encompasses all religions for which the prophets were sent, for the islām (submission to God) represents the general spirit (al-rūḥ al-kullī) of the religions, on which they agreed, regardless of the differences in their religious practices (al-takālīf wa ṣuwar al-a'māl).²⁶¹

II. Irtibāṭ al-Āyāt wa al-Suwar (Interconnection Between Verses and Chapters)

Irtibāt is defined by al-Zarkashī as a discipline in which a certain aspect which links verses (āyāt) or chapters (suwar) is realized by means of a logical ²⁵⁸See al-Zamakhshari, al-Kashshaf, 2: 345 and 381. On these pages, al-Zamakhshari says that the word is understood in Q. 2: 18 and 85 to mean "al-'adl wa al-tawhid" (justice and oneness of God).

²⁵⁹See Muḥammad Rashid Riḍā, Tafsir al-Qur'ān al-Ḥakim (known as Tafsir al-Manār) (Cairo: Dār al-Manār, 1954), 3: 257, and 358.

²⁶⁰See Quṭb, Fi Zilal al-Qur'an, 1: 356-7.

²⁶¹ Ridā, Tafsir al-Qur'an. 3: 257.

('aqli, perceptible (hissi, or imaginary (khayali) conjecture, or the like.²⁶² It is an issue that has been discussed by Qur'ān exegetes since the fourth century. Hijra. It is reported that the first scholar to speak of irtibal was Abū Bakr al-Nīsābūrī (d. 309-10/921-2). Whenever an aya was recited to al-Nīsābūrī, he explained why the verse is located before one and after another verse. Similarly, whenever a certain sūra was studied, he explained the connection between the sūra and that which precedes and follows it in the canonical order.²⁶³ More profound explanations of this discipline are to be found in the exegetical works of al-Rāzī, ²⁶⁴ Abū Ja'far ibn al-Zubayr (d. 708/1308), ²⁶⁵ and al-Biqā'ī (d. 885/1480). ²⁶⁶

The main purpose behind searching for instances of irtibat, according to Abū Bakr ibn al-'Arabī (d. 543/1148), is to bring out the unity of the Qur'ān in terms of its meaning (muttasiqat al-ma'ānī) and the coherence of its words ²⁶²Al-Zarkashi, al-Burhan, 1: 36; and al-Suyūṭi, al-Itqan, 3: 323. Other terms that are used by exegetes to refer to the above definition are al-rabṭ, al-munāṣaba, and al-tanāṣub.

²⁶³Al-Zarkashī, al-Burhān, 1: 36; and al-Suyūṭī, al-Itqān, 3: 322.

²⁶⁴In his al-Tafsir al-Kabir, al-Rāzi explains the irtibāṭ aspects between verses within a sūra, and those between the beginning of a sūra and the end of another.

²⁶⁵According to al-Suyūṭī, Ibn al-Zubayr was Abū Ḥayyān's teacher. He wrote on Qur'ānic studies, e.g., al-Burhān fī Munāsabat Tartīb Suwar al-Qur'ān and Milāk al-Ta'wil. See al-Suyūṭī, al-Itqān, 3: 323. See also Muḥammad ibn Shākir, Fawāt al-Wafayāt, ed. Iḥsān 'Abbās (Beirut: Dār Ṣādir, 1973), 2: 555; and the introduction of Sa'īd al-Fallāḥ to his edition of Ibn al-Zubayr's Milāk al-Ta'wil al-Qaṭi' bi-dhawi al-Ilḥād wa al-Ta'ṭil fī Tawjīh al-Mutashābih al-Lafz min Ay al-Tanzil (Beirut: Dār al-Gharb al-Islāmī, 1983), 1: 101. It is very possible that Abū Ḥayyān was very much influenced by Ibn al-Zubayr in relation to knowledge of the irtibāṭ. In his al-Baḥr al-Muḥiṭ, the former very often introduces a certain sūra by mentioning its irtibāṭ with the sūras preceding it. See Abū Ḥayyān, al-Baḥr al-Muḥiṭ.

(muntazimat al-mabani).267 The unity of the Qur'an is described by exegetes through the aspects of irtibat which, according to al-Zarkashi, consist in comparison (al-tamthil/al-tanzir), contradiction (al-mudadda), or digression (alistitrad).268 An example of the tamthil aspect of irtibat is shown in the connection between Q. 17 (S. al-Isra): 1, which speaks of the isra (night journey) of the Prophet Muhammad, and verse 2 in the same sura, which speaks of the revelation to the Prophet Moses. For al-Zarkashi, the comparison aspect of the irtibat between the two verses is that while God showed evidently ('iyanan) through the isra to the Prophet Muhammad His concealed signs, He demonstrated by explanation (bayanan) His revelation to Moses, which constitutes another divine sign.²⁶⁹ The mudadda aspect can be seen, moreover, in the relation between Q. 2 (S. al-Bagara): 1-5, and Q. 2: 6. Al-Biqā'ī states that the passage in Q. 2: 1-5 concerns the believers' acceptance of the Qur'an. On the contrary, verse 6 explains the unbelievers' rejection of it.270 These verses, however, are united by a single theme, i.e., the people's attitude toward divine revelation. Finally, the istitrad aspect of irtibat is elaborated by al-Zamakhshari ²⁶⁶See Burhān al-Dīn Ibrāhīm ibn 'Umar al-Biqā'ī, Nazm al-Durar fī Tanāsub al-Ayāt wa al-Suwar (Hayderabad: Majlis Dā'irat al-Ma'ārif al-Uthmānīya, 1969).

²⁶⁷Al-Zarkashī, al-Burhān, 1: 36; and al-Suyūṭī, al-Itqān, 3: 322.

²⁶⁸See al-Zarkashi, al-Burhan, 1: 40-52; and al-Suyūṭi, al-Itqan, 3: 324-330.

²⁶⁹Al-Zarkashi, al-Burhan, 1: 42. Cf. Abū Ḥayyan, al-Baḥr al-Muḥiṭ, 6: 6. In this passage, Abū Ḥayyan points to the comparison between the glorification of Muḥammad with the isra and that of Moses with the Torah.

²⁷⁰See al-Biqā'ī, Nazm al-Durar, 1: 92.

when interpreting Q. 7 (S. al-A'rā̄̄): 26. He says that the verse comes by way of digression ('alā sabil̄ al-istiṭrād̄). The verse, which comes after the mention of the appearance of Adam's and Eve's pudenda (Q. 7: 22-25) is referred to in order to show divine kindness in the creation of clothing, the humiliation of uncovering one's pudenda, and to indicate that covering the latter is part of taqwā (piety).²⁷¹

Nineteenth century discussions of the concept of irtiba! followed a somewhat different format in contrast to the earlier concept. Ibn 'Āshūr (d. 1867),²⁷² for example, maintains that between the Qur'ānic verses in one suīra there must be tanāsub (interconnection) with regard to their main purpose (gharaā).²⁷³ Introducing every suīra, Ibn 'Āshūr always explains to the reader its gharaā. For example, when dealing with Q. 2 (S. al-Baqara), he begins his interpretation by stating that the suīra consists of two main purposes to which all of its verses refer: the first is to affirm the supremacy of Islam in terms of its guidance and foundations for moral purification; the second is to explain the sharī'a (Islamic legal rulings).²⁷⁴

Some Qur'an exegetes of the 20th century have taken a more systematic approach to the study of Qur'anic unity. Mustansir Mir²⁷⁵ maintains that unlike ²⁷¹Al-Zamakhshari, al-Kashshaf, 2: 97.

²⁷²See Muḥammad al-Ṭāhir ibn 'Āshūr, Tafsir al-Taḥrir wa al-Tanwir (Tunis: al-Dār al-Tūnisiya li al-Nashr, 1984).

²⁷³Ibn 'Āshūr, Tafsir, 1: 79.

²⁷⁴Ibn 'Āshūr, Tafsīr, 1: 203.

most classical commentators who discussed the irtibāṭ between verses within one sūra, or between sūras in a "linear-atomistic" approach, some interpreters of the modern period, such as al-Farāhī, ²⁷⁶ apply an "organic-holistic" method. Al-Farāhī (d. 1930-1), for instance, offers the concept of what he calls "niṣām, or, naṣm al-Qur'ān" (coherence of the Qur'ān). He is not satisfied with the traditional approach. In his Dalā'il al-Niṣām al-Farāhī says:

The interconnection (tanāsub) between one verse and another does not demonstrate that the Word of God [i.e., the Qur'ān] is something united, coherent in itself. Those who seek the tanāsub are sometimes satisfied with any tanāsub (interconnection). They forget the relation through which the Qur'ān becomes united. They also sometimes seek relations between contiguous verses (al-āyāt almutajāwira), whereas, in fact, they are not connected [directly] to each other. This is because a verse is related to another verse that comes long before it.

In short, what I mean by the nizām (coherence of the Qur'ān) is that a sūra constitutes one (coherent) statement. It (also) has a connection with a preceding and following sūra, or with a far-preceding and far-following one. The same thing happens in terms of nazm al-āyāt. Between verses or sūras there are sometimes parenthetical ones (āyāt mu'tariḍa or suwar mu'tariḍa). On the basis of this principle, you can see that the whole Qur'ān is one, and has interconnection and sequence in its parts from the beginning to the end.²⁷⁷

²⁷⁵See Mustansir Mir, "The Sūra as a Unity: A Twentieth Century Development in Qur'ān Exegesis," in Approaches to the Qur'ān, 211-24. In these passages, Mir discusses the ideas of naṣm according to Thanavī, Quṭb, Darwaza, al-Ṭabāṭabā'i, al-Farāhī and al-Iṣlāḥī. See also his, Coherence in the Qur'ān, 25-98.

²⁷⁶See 'Abd al-Ḥamid al-Farāhi, Dala'il al-Nizām (Ḥaydarābād: Maḥfūzat al-Dā'ira al-Ḥamidiya, 1388 H.).

²⁷⁷'Abd al-Ḥamid al-Farāhi, Dala'il al-Nizām (India: Maḥfūzat al-Dā'ira al-Ḥamidiya, 1388 H.), 74-5. Al-Farāhi's concept of nazm was later developed by his disciple, al-Iṣlāhi. For detailed information, see Mir, Coherence in the Qur'ān: A Study of Iṣlāḥi's concept of Nazm in Tadabbur-i Qur'ān (Indianapolis: American Trust Publications, 1986).

As Ibn 'Āshūr does in explaining his notion of gharad, al-Farāhī points out that every sūra has a main idea ('amūd) to which refer all issues (maṭālib) contained in its verses.²⁷⁸ The maṭlab (issue) may represent ta'lil (argumentation), ta'ṣil (giving a firm foundation), tafri (derivation), tafṣil (particularization), tamthil (exemplification), irād al-muqābil wa al-ḍidd (providing comparison and contradiction), or tanbīh (admonition).²⁷⁹ All these various kinds of maṭālib are interrelated to each other, in the sense that they refer to their 'amūd. Over and above this, all 'amūds in the Qur'ān are united to one other.²⁸⁰

Thus it can be concluded that irtibāṭ was studied by exegetes of both the classical and modern periods, regardless of the differences in their ideas, in order to demonstrate the unity of the Qur'ān. Al-Rāzī and Ibn 'Āshūr even explicitly state that an understanding of irtibāṭ can help convince people of the inimitability of the Qur'ān.²⁸¹ The question, therefore, arises: What did Bint al-Shāṭi' think of this idea?

Bint al-Shāṭi''s position on the irtibāṭ corresponds in part to that of Ibn 'Āshūr and al-Farāhī. Bint al-Shāṭi' agrees with the sūra-coherence idea, or in ²⁷⁸Al-Farāhī, Dala'il, 73.

²⁷⁹Al-Farāhī, Dala'il, 72.

²⁸⁰See al-Farāhī, Dala'il, 93-105. In these pasages, al-Farāhī shows the nazm of the Qur'ān by mentioning 'amūds and their maṭālib from Sūrat al-Fātiḥa to Sūrat al-A'rāf.

²⁸¹Al-Rāzī, al-Tafsīr al-Kabīr, 2: 18; and Ibn 'Āshūr, Tafsīr, 1: 79. See also al-Suyūṭī, al-Itqān, 3: 323.

Mir's words, the "sura-as-a-unity" concept. 282 Explaining her reason for choosing to interpret fourteen short suras in her al-Tafsir al-Bayani, Bint al-Shati' says that the fourteen suras selected, most of which are Meccan, have one theme (wahdat almawdu^T) apiece.²⁸³ Introducing Q. 100 (S. al-'Adiyat), for instance, she states that the theme of the sura is the Last Day. 284 All of its verses are related to each other, and refer to that theme. She argues that the sura begins with the presentation of a perceptible phenomenon of sudden attack (Q. 100: 1-5) to represent the abstract event of the Day of Resurrection on which all human beings will be scattered and judged in accordance with their deeds (Q. 100: 6-11).²⁸⁵ Similarly, commenting on Q. 89 (S. al-Fajr) whose major theme is a moral lesson, she says that its verses are interconnected. First of all, verses 1-14 of the sura suggest those who are capable of reason (dhu hijr) can grasp the lesson of the destiny of the 'Ad, the Thamud, and Pharaoh, who were tyrants, and among the corrupt of this world. Their immoral behavior, according to verses 15-16, resulted from the temptation of wealth and their evil characters. Verses 17-20 then emphasize ²⁸²See Mir, "The Sura as a unity," 220.

²⁸³Bint al-Shāṭi', al-Tafsir al-Bayāni, 1: 18. Jansen's speculation that Bint al-Shāṭi''s preference for these fourteen sūras was based on her wish to avoid becoming involved in sectarian polemics, is not proven right. See Jansen, The Interpretation of the Koran, 69. His idea is not in accordance with Bint al-Shāṭi''s explicit statement. As a matter of fact, many polemical issues related to theological, linguistic, exegetical aspects, are dealt with in her works on Qur'ānic studies.

²⁸⁴Bint al-Shāṭi', al-Tafsir al-Bayāni, 1: 103. There are many other examples of Bint al-Shāṭi''s application of the above idea. See, e.g., her al-Tafsir al-Bayāni, 1: 75, 76; and 2: 129, 149.

immorality by stating that they insulted orphans, were not interested in social solidarity, and could not distinguish between ḥalāl (lawful) and ḥarām (forbidden). Finally, the sūra ends with the verses which speak of God's punishment and reward in the Hereafter.²⁸⁶

Bint al-Shāṭi' differs from other exegetes in regard to which suras and verses are liable to analysis in terms of *irtibā*ṭ. This problem centers on whether the Qur'ān should be interpreted in accordance with its canonical or its chronological order. Unlike al-Nīsābūrī, al-Rāzī, al-Biqā'ī and al-Farāhī, who looked for *irtibā*ṭ in consideration of the Qur'ān's canonical order, Bint al-Shāṭi bases herself on its chronological sequence. She maintains that it is improper to explain aspects of al-irtibāṭ between verses or suras which were not revealed at one and the same time, or contiguously. When introducing Q. 102 (S. al-Takāṭhur), for example, she tells that some interpreters, such as al-Nīsābūrī, connect it with the sura preceding it in the canonical order, i.e., Q. 101 (S. al-Qāri'a).²⁸⁷ Niṣām al-Dīn Al-Nīsābūrī (d. 406-7/1015-6) says that the *irtibā*ṭ between the two suras lies in the admonitory atmosphere (al-jaww al-indhārī) with regard to the Day of Judgement.²⁸⁸ This explanation is rejected by Bint al-Shāṭi', who says that there is no point in looking for the *irtibā*ṭ between the two suras ²⁸⁵Bint al-Shāṭi', al-Tafsir al-Bayani, 1: 103.

²⁸⁶Bint al-Shāṭi', al-Tafsir al-Bayāni, 2: 153.

²⁸⁷Bint al-Shāṭi', al-Tafsir al-Bayani, 1: 195

²⁸⁸Nizām al-Dīn al-Ḥasan ibn Muḥammad l-Nīsābūrī, Ghara'ib al-Qur'ān wa Ragha'ib al-Furqān, published in the margin of al-Ṭabarī, Jāmi' al-Bayān, 30: 154.

because they were not revealed at the same time or one after the other. Surat al-Takāthur was in fact revealed long before Surat al-Qāri'a; in the interval at least thirteen suras were revealed.²⁸⁹ She adopts the same position in her comments on Q. 68 (S. al-Qalam),²⁹⁰ Q. 89 (S. al-Fajr),²⁹¹ and Q. 92 (S. al-Layl).²⁹²

Nevertheless, Bint al-Shāṭi"s idea of a chronologically-oriented *irtibā*ṭ is called into question when she deals with the *irtibā*ṭ between verses in Sūrat al-Qalam. She says that the sūra was revealed in the early Meccan period, except for verses 17-33 and 48-50 which are Medinan.²⁹³ Commenting on verse 33, which reads: "Such was the punishment. And verily the punishment of the Hereafter is ²⁸⁹Bint al-Shāṭi', al-Tafsir al-Bayāni, 1: 195.

²⁹⁰Bint al-Shāṭi', al-Tafsīr al-Bayānī, 2: 39. In this passage, she does not agree with those who elaborate the *irtibā*t between Sūrat al-Qalam and Sūrat al-Mulk (Q. 67). She says that the latter was revealed later (muta'akhkhira). It is 77th in the chronological order. Between the sūra and Sūrat al-Qalam there were revealed more than 70 sūras.

²⁹¹When dealing with the qasam (oath) in Q. 89: 1-4, which read: "Wa l-fajri wa layalin 'ashrin wa l-shaf'i wa l-watri wa l-layli idha yasri" (By the Dawn, and ten nights, and the Even and the Odd, and the night when it departeth), Abū Ḥayyān and 'Abduh maintain that the jawab al-gasam (the main clause of the structure of gasam) is the end of Q. 88 (Sūrat al-Ghāshiya): 25-26, which read: "Inna ilayna iyabahum thumma inna 'alayna i hisabahum" (Lo! unto Us their return, and Ours their reckoning). See Abū Ḥayyan, al-Bahr al-Muhit, 8: 457-8; and 'Abduh, Tafsir Juz' 'Amma, 61. Bint al-Shāti' rejects this idea, saying: "In this explanation of the interconnection (al-rabt/al-irtibat) between the two suras there is suspicion (wahm). Although Surat al-Ghāshiya comes directly before Surat al-Fajr in the canonical order, the former was revealed after the latter at the end of the Mecccan period. Surat al-Ghashiya is 68th in the chronological order. Between the two suras there were 58 suras revealed. We understand that the canonical order has a significant aspect. However, we do not conceive the irtibal between the qasam in Surat al-Fajr and jawab al-gasam in Surat al-Ghashiya. This would have been as if the gasam continued to be suspended (mu'allaq) without the jawab, until Surat al-Ghāshiya was revealed after 58 sūras." Bint al-Shāṭi', al-Tafsir al-Bayāni, 2: 136.

²⁹²See Bint al-Shāṭi', al-Tafsir al-Bayāni, 2: 97.

²⁹³Bint al-Shāṭi', al-Tafsir al-Bayani, 2: 39.

greater if they did but know," she contends that the verse encourages the people of the Prophet to learn ('ibra) from the story of the "owners of the garden" (aṣḥāb al-janna) who were punished by God due to their injustice (zulm), as related in verses 17-32.294 Bint al-Shāṭi' then affirms that these [Medinan] verses are interconnected (murtabiṭa) in terms of the 'ibra (moral lesson) present in the following verses (34-39), which speak of God's reward for good people.295 Here, one can see that Bint al-Shāṭi' relates Medinan verses to early Meccan verses. This means that her application of the concept of irtibāṭ does sometimes differ from the theory that she herself established.

when they vowed they would pluck its fruit next morning, and made no exception (for the will of God). Then a visitation came upon it while they slept, and in the morning it was as if plucked. And they cried out one unto another in the morning, saying: Run unto your field if ye would pluck (the fruit). So they went off, saying one unto another in low tones: No needy man shall enter it today against you. They went betimes, strong in (this) purpose. But when they saw it, they said: Lo! we are in error! Nay, but we are desolate! The best among them said: Said I not unto you: Why glorify ye not (Allah)? They said: Glorified be our Lord! Lo! we have been wrong-doers. Then some of them drew near unto others, self-reproaching. They said: Alas for us! In truth we were outregeous. It may be that our Lord will give us better than this in place thereof. Lo! we beseech our Lord."

²⁹⁵Bint al-Shāṭi', al-Tafsir al-Bayani, 2: 62-6, especially 66.

Chapter Three

Bint al-Shāṭi"s Attitude Towards Asbāb al-Nuzul: Between Theory and Application

The science of asbab al-nuzull²⁹⁶ ("the occasions of revelation") has been applied by many mufassirun (interpreters) to understanding the Qur'an, and studied in depth by scholars both past and present. Its importance is recognized not only by those who base their interpretations on the riwayat (reports attributed to the Prophet, his Companions and their Successors) approach, like Ibn Jarir al-Tabari and Ibn Kathir, but also by those who apply ra'y (reasoning) in exegesis, like al-Zamakhshari and Fakhr al-Din al-Razi. Knowing the occasion associated with the revelation of a Qur'anic verse or suna is of great help in arriving at an understanding of its meaning. It follows that, because of its significance, many scholars wrote books on the subject, among them al-Waḥidi (d. 428/1075), who authored the work Asbab al-Nuzul, and al-Suyūti who composed the work Lubab al-Nuqul fi Asbab al-Nuzul. These works contain reports about the occasions on which the verses or sunas of the Qur'an were revealed. 298

²⁹⁶The word asbāb is the plural of sabāb (occasion). Both are used in this thesis.

²⁹⁷See Ibn Taymiya, Muqaddima, 38; al-Suyūṭi, Lubāb al-Nuqul fī Asbāb al-Nuzul (Beirut: Dār Iḥyā' al-'Ulūm, 1978), 13; and al-'Akk, Uṣul al-Tafsir, 99.

Issues surrounding the asbāb al-nuzul, such as the degree of their significance, the problem of contradictory reports, the difficulty of the numerous reports for the revelation of a single verse and especially the question of the 'ibra' (decisive point) for determining the message of a verse, have been discussed in the many books on 'ulum al-Qur'ān (the sciences of the Qur'ān) and uṣul al-fiqh (Islamic legal theory). Among those who in modern times devoted themselves to such discussions was Bint al-Shāṭi'. In her work Muqaddima fī al-Manhaj, she presents a brief theoretical discussion on asbāb al-nuzul. The theory is then applied to her interpretations of several sūras of the Qur'ān, especially in her book al-Tafsīr al-Bayānī li al-Qur'ān al-Karīm.

A study of Bint al-Shāti"s views on asbāb al-nuzul is needed for at least three reasons: first, Bint al-Shāṭi"s approach to reports on asbāb al-nuzul provides an opportunity to examine her consistency in using this source in her interpretation; second, there is the question how significant the reports of asbāb al-nuzul are to her tafsīr; and finally, previous works dealing with her views on the asbāb al-nuzul need to be reviewed and expanded on. Boullata²⁹⁹ and Jansen,³⁰⁰ for instance, analyze her position on the asbāb al-nuzul. However, they do not go into these in too much detail, probably because their purpose is only to provide a general account of her method of interpreting the Qur'ān. Amīn's thesis presents a relatively short description of the subject. He does not provide any analysis or examples of Bint al-Shāṭi's implementation of the asbāb alnuzul. This chapter will, therefore, address the issue in more detail, concentrating especially on her critical attitude towards asbāb alnuzul reports, the significance of asbāb alnuzul and the idea of the 'ibra (decisive point).

²⁹⁸See al-Zarkashi, al-Burhān, 1: 22; and Rippin, "The Qur'anic Asbāb al-Nuzūl Material: An Analysis of Its Use and Development" (Ph.D. diss., McGill University, 1981), 20.

²⁹⁹See Boullata, "Modern Qur'an Exegesis," 103-13.

³⁰⁰See Jansen, The Interpretation of the Koran, 70-1.

I. Her Treatment of Ashab al-Nuzul Reports

Scholars in the field of 'ulum al-Qur'an define the term sabab al-nuzul as an event, or a question raised to the Prophet, in answer to which a Qur'anic verse(s) or a Qur'anic chapter(s) was revealed.³⁰² In relation to the asbāb al-nuzul, the passages of the Qur'ān are divided into two categories. The first of these includes passages revealed without any particular event preceding them. This category is called "mā nazala ibtida an." The other, with which the discussion of the asbāb al-nuzul is most concerned, includes verses whose revelation followed a particular occasion, and is called "mā nazala 'aqib wāqi'a aw su'āl." It is often found that within a single sūra of the Qur'ān both kinds occur. For example, the first five ³⁰¹See Amin, "A Study of Bint al-Shāṭi"s Exegesis," 37.

³⁰²See Dāwūd al-'Aṭṭār, Mujaz 'Ulum al-Qur'an (Beirut: Mu'assasat al-A'lami li al-Maṭbū'āt, 1979), 124; and Muḥammad Ḥusayn al-Ṭabāṭabā'i, al-Qur'an fī al-Islam, tr. Aḥmad al-Ḥusayni (Tehran: Markaz I'lām al-Dhikrā, 1983), 155.

³⁰³See Muḥammad 'Abd al-Salam Kafafi and 'Abd Allah al-Sharif, Fi 'Ulum al-Qur'an: Dirasat wa Muḥaḍarat (Beirut: Dar al-Nahḍa al-'Arabiya, 1981), 63; and Muḥammad al-Ṣaliḥ al-Ṣadiq, al-Bayan fi 'Ulum al-Qur'an (Algiers: al-Mu'assasa al-Waṭaniya li al-Kitab, 1989), 111.

verses of surat al-'Alaq were revealed without being preceded by any specific event calling for a response in the form of revelation. The other verses of the sura, however, were sent down to the Prophet Muḥammad for the first time with respect to Abū Jahl's action — regardless of the debate over whether the 'ibra' (decisive point) lies in the generality of the words, or the specificity of the occasion. It is reported on the authority of Abū Hurayra that Abū Jahl said: "Does Muḥammad cover his face with dust among you?" Someone replied: "Yes." Abū Jahl then said: "By al-Lāt and al-'Uzzā, indeed, if I see him performing prayer, I will set my foot on his neck, and sprinkle his face with dust." There were then revealed several more verses of the sura: "And yet, but yet man is rebellious, for he thinks he is sufficient in himself. Surely, your returning is to your Lord." [Q. al-'Alaq (96): 6-8]304

Bint al-Shāṭi', who bases her interpretation mostly on philological principles,³⁰⁵ makes an attempt to deal with the problem of asbāb al-nuzul. Before, however, presenting her contribution to this field, it is important to introduce her "theological" opinion concerning the relationship between revelation (al-waḥy) and the occasions on which it was revealed. She points out that the connection between a verse or sūra and its sabab al-nuzul is not a causal one, which she calls ³⁰⁴See al-Ṭabarī, Jāmi' al-Bayān, 30: 163; Ibn Kathīr, Tafsīr al-Qur'ān al-'Azīm, 4: 565; al-Rāzī, al-Tafsīr al-Kabīr, 32: 20; al-Zamakhsharī, al-Kashshāf, 4: 224; Al-Suyūṭī, Lubāb al-Nuqūl, 232; and Bint al-Shāṭi', al-Tafsīr al-Bayānī, 2: 26.

³⁰⁵See Boullata, "Modern Qur'an Exegesis," 106-13; idem, "The Rhetorical Interpretation," 152-4; and Jansen, The Interpretation of the Koran, 70-6.

"al-'illiya," meaning that a verse depends on its sabab al-nuzul, just as the existence of an effect (al-ma'lul) depends on that of its cause (al-'illa). This is because it is inconceivable that a certain verse should not have been revealed if its sabab al-nuzul did not take place. The seems to me that she wants to say that revelation constitutes God's will and knowledge, and that His will and knowledge are qadim (eternal), and ghayr muḥdath (not created). Therefore, the revelation was neither influenced nor occasioned by any temporal event. On this point, her opinion corresponds to the Ash'arī theological point of view. In short, she does not subordinate the revelation to the occasion which it follows. This position is further reinforced by the fact that not every verse has a sabab al-nuzul, as we know.

³⁰⁶See Bint al-Shāṭi', Muqaddima, 133; idem, al-Tafsir al-Bayāni, 1: 23; and Boullata, "Modern Qur'ān Exegesis," 106.

³⁰⁷See Bint al-Shāṭi', al-Qur'an wa Qadaya, 36.

³⁰⁸When talking about the eternity of the revelation (Kalām Allāh, God's speech), al-Ash'ari says: "This proof of the eternity of Kalam Allah constitutes the eternity of God's will (iradat Allah). For if His willing were temporally produced, it would have to be produced by God either in Himself, or in another, or as self-subsistent. But God cannot produce it in Himself, because He is not a substrate for produced things; and He cannot produce it as self-subsistent, because it is an attribute, and an attribute cannot subsist in itself - just as God cannot produce a knowledge and power subsisting in themselves; and He cannot produce it in another, because this would make it necessary for that other to be willing by God's willing. Therefore, since it is impossible to allow these alternatives of which one would have to be realized if God's willing were temporally produced, it is certain that God's willing is eternal, and that by it God has ever been willing." This is McCarthy's translation of a passage of al-Ash'ari's Kitab al-Luma'. See Abū al-Hasan 'Ali ibn Ismā'il al-Ash'ari, Kitab al-Luma' fi al-Radd 'ala Ahl al-Zaygh wa al-Bida', edited by Richard J. McCarthy (Beirut: al-Matba'a al-Kathulikiya, 1952), 23; and Najm al-Din Sulayman ibn 'Abd al-Qawiy al-Tufi, Sharh Mukhtasar al-Rawda, edited by 'Abd Allah ibn 'Abd al-Muhsin al-Turki (Beirut: Mu'assasat al-Risala, 1988), 2: 501.

Bint al-Shāṭi' tries to be careful in using the asbāb al-nuzul reports. She does not accept those which contradict historical evidence. For example, when discussing Q. 93: 3, she mentions that according to some exegetes, like al-Rāzī, Abū Ḥayyān and al-Nīsābūrī, the occasion that preceded the ibṭā' al-waḥy was the moment when "a dog of the prophet's grandsons al-Ḥasan and al-Ḥusayn entered the house of the Prophet. Gabriel then said to the Prophet: 'Don't you know that we never enter a house in which is a dog or picture?'"³⁰⁹ To Bint al-Shāṭi', this report does not make sense, for the history of Islam tells us that Ḥasan and Ḥusayn were born three or four years after the Hijra, whereas Q. 93, which is one of the first sections revealed, dates from several years before the Hijra. ³¹⁰ It can be seen that, according to Bint al-Shāṭi', historical consideration is a crucial tool for assessing the authenticity of asbāb al-nuzul.

Nevertheless, Bint al-Shāṭi''s assessment is sometimes confusing. Let me give an example. When commenting on Q. 68 (S. al-Qalam): 17-33, she rejects the report that these verses were revealed in part concerning the strory of the Quraysh. It is recorded that at the time of the battle of Badr the Quraysh swore to destroy the Prophet and his Companions, but in fact failed to fulfil their oath.³¹¹ She points out that the report is not consonant with historical evidence, by saying that the battle happened in the second year of the Hijra, when $Su\overline{r}at$ alQalam was clearly revealed in Mecca about 15 years before the battle.³¹² The problematic point here is that in the introduction to her interpretation of this $Su\overline{r}a$ she says, on the one hand, that it is a Meccan $Su\overline{r}a$ with the exception of verses 17-33 and 48-50,³¹³ whereas, on the other hand, her criticism implies that verses 17-33 of the $Su\overline{r}a$ were revealed after all in Mecca.

³⁰⁹See al-Rāzī, al-Tafsīr al-Kabīr, 31: 211; Abū Ḥayyān, al-Baḥr al-Muḥiţ, 8: 485; and al-Nīsābūrī, Tafsīr Ghara'ib al-Qur'an, in the margin of al-Ṭabarī's Jāmi' al-Bayān, 30: 108. See also Bint al-Shāṭi', al-Tafsīr al-Bayānī, 1: 35.

³¹⁰ Bint al-Shāṭi', al-Tafsir al-Bayani, 1: 35.

Regardless of Bint al-Shāṭi's self-contradiction in the above matter, it can at least be said that her critical attitude towards the sources is supported by Rippin's thesis that asbāb al-nuzul reports are not historical evidence but were created by later Muslim generations in order to justify their interpretation of the Qur'ān.³¹⁴ However, unlike Rippin, who totally denies the authenticity of the asbāb al-nuzul reports, Bint al-Shāṭi' believes that many of them constitute true records of historical situations surrounding the revelation of certain suras or verses, as will be seen in the following discussion.

³¹¹ Abū Ḥayyan, al-Baḥr al-Muḥit, 8: 313-4.

³¹²Bint al-Shāṭi', al-Tafsir al-Bayāni, 2: 65.

³¹³Bint al-Shāṭi', al-Tafsir al-Bayani, 2: 39.

³¹⁴See Andrew Rippin, "The Qur'anic Asbāb al-Nuzūl Material: An Analysis of Its Use and Development," (Ph.D. diss., McGill University, 1981).

II. The Significance of Asbab al-Nuzul

There is no disagreement that a knowledge of asbab al-nuzul is important to the interpretation of Qur'anic verses where there is a question of its application. The extent of its significance, however, is still debated among scholars of 'ulum al-Qur'an. Al-Zarkashi, for instance, assigned knowledge of the subject a rather elevated importance. He mentions in his al-Burhan fi 'Ulum al-Qur'an six benefits of such knowledge, namely: (1) understanding the factor that instigates a legal decision (tashri' al-hukm); (2) particularizing a legal decision in the eyes of those who point out that the decisive point (al-'ibra) is the specific cause; (3) understanding the meaning of words; (4) understanding when a word, which is universal, is meant in a particular sense on the basis of other evidence; (5) avoiding the suspicion of al-hasr (limitation); and (6) eliminating the difficulty in determining the meaning of a verse. He then gives many examples of these points.315 From the above, we can say that, according to al-Zarkashi, without knowing asbab al-nuzul, no one can interpret the Qur'an correctly. On this issue, al-Khuli acknowledges implicitly in his Manahij Tajdid, through his belief in the necessity of knowing what he calls "ma hawl al-Qur'an" (the context or the circumstances surrounding the Qur'ān), that the knowledge of asbāb al-nuzul is of considerable importance. He says:

³¹⁵See al-Zarkashi, al-Burhān, 1: 22-9. See also al-Suyūṭi, al-Mukhtār min Kitāb al-Itqān fī 'Ulum al-Qur'ān (Beirut: Dār al-Kitāb al-'Arabi, n.d.), 33-4; Dāwūd al-'Aṭṭār, Mujaz 'Ulum al-Qur'ān, 127-30; Muḥammad Muḥammad Khalifa, Ma'ā Nuzul al-Qur'ān (Cairo: Maktabat al-Naḥḍa al-Miṣriya, 1971), 27-30; Muḥammad 'Abd al-'Aẓīm al-Zarqāni, Manāhil al-'Irfān fī 'Ulum al-Qur'ān (Cairo: Dār Iḥyā' al-Kutub al-'Arabiya, 1962); Muṣṭafā Muḥammad al-Bajiqni, Manhaj al-Qur'ān al-Karīm fī Taqrīr al-Aḥkām (Cairo: al-Dār al-Jamāhīrīya, 1993), 30-3; and Abū Zayd, Mafhūm al-Naṣṣ, 109-22.

The studies on $m\bar{a}$ hawl al-Qur'an are necessary studies for the purpose of the interpretation [of the Qur'an] as we suggest. Accordingly, those who do not have the specific knowledge of $m\bar{a}$ hawl al-Qur'an are obliged to study it in order that they may be able to understand the Qur'an in a good and sound manner.³¹⁶

However, he does not mention clearly the extent to which the asbab al-nuzul are important.

Bint al-Shāṭi' recognizes that there is a harmonious relationship between the two. The revelation responds to the occasion that precedes it, and the occasion, to some extent, indicates what the revelation means. Accordingly, she says in several places that asbāb al-nuzul constitute indications of the situation surrounding the naṣṣ (the text of the Qur'ān). Again, when dealing with sūrat al-'Alaq, verses 6-9, which were revealed when Abū Jahl demonstrated a negative attitude towards Islam, as quoted before, she says: "The structures of the verses of the sūra show that they were revealed after the Prophet announced the message of God, and declared [the need for] worship of God, and then faced ³¹⁶Amin al-Khūli, Manahij Tajdid, 309. See also Jansen, The Interpretation of the Koran, 65-6.

³¹⁷See Bint al-Shāṭi', al-Tafsir al-Bayāni, 1: 23. To compare her notion, see also Fazlur Rahman, Islam and Modernity: Transformation of an Intellectual Tradition (Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1982), 143.

denial [from the pagan society]."318 This interpretation represents one aspect of the significance of the asbab al-nuzul.

The significance of the asbāb al-nuzul also rests on their relationship with the specific, literal meaning of words. Boullata's analysis that, according to Bint al-Shāṭi', a traditional report on sabāb al-nuzul can be a means of justifying a certain meaning for a word,³¹⁹ is quite correct. When interpreting the word al-ākhira from the fourth verse of sūrat al-Duḥā, which was revealed on the occasion of futūr al-waḥy (the restraint of the revelation),³²⁰ for instance, Bint al-Shāṭi' says:

In the verse from Surat al-Duḥā, it is clear that al-ākhira means the expected tomorrow (al-ghad al-marjūw). Its connection with the word laka (for you) [points to] its specification with the Prophet Muḥammad. Surely, God affirms with the promised goodness the elimination of al-tawdi ' (leave-taking) and al-qilā (hate) because He abolishes the effect of the futūr al-waḥy.³²¹

From the above statement, one can see that her interpretation of the word alakhira refers to the day when there will be an end to the unhappiness caused by the futur al-wahy to the sabab al-nuzul of the sura.

Bint al-Shāṭi' also admits the sabab al-nuzul's significance in justifying and explaining rationally the importance of the use of certain words in the Qur'ān.

³¹⁸Bint al-Shāṭi', al-Tafsir al-Bayani, 2: 27.

³¹⁹Boullata, "Modern Qur'ān Exegesis", 106.

³²⁰See Bint al-Shāti', al-Tafsir al-Bayāni, 1: 23.

For instance, in Surat al-Duḥā, whose main topic is the revelation yet to come, she analyzes why the employment of the words <code>duḥā</code> (the forenoon) [in the first verse], and <code>layl</code> (night) [in the second verse] is important. She says:

Al-muqsam bih (the word by which the oath is made) in the two verses of the sūra of al-Duḥā is a material form and a sensory event in which human beings witness every day the glow of the forenoon, and then the darkness of night when all is tranquil and quiet. In the successive arrival of the two circumstances, there is no deficiency in the system of the world, nor anything bringing about rejection, nor does anyone suffer from the fact that the sky disappears from the earth and hides itself in darkness and wildness after the glow of light of the forenoon. So, what is so surprising about the fact that after the intimacy of revelation and the emergence of its light on the Prophet, there comes the restraint of revelation, just like the quiet night and the bright the forenoon that human beings witness?³²²

In this case, she uses the contents of the sabab al-nuzul, the occasion of the futur al-waḥy, to make sense of the use of the two words in the sura. In other words, a traditional report on asbāb al-nuzul can explain the accordance of words in the Qur'anic verses with the circumstances which attended their revelation to the Prophet.³²³ This interpretation proves the compatibility of wording with a special situation (iqtiḍa al-lafz li al-ḥal). On this point, al-Shāṭibī says:

The knowledge of occasions of revelations is necessary for those who want to pursue the knowledge of the Qur'an. That is because the center (madar) of the 'ilm al-ma'ani and al-bayan (science of ³²¹ Bint al-Shāti', al-Tafsīr al-Bayānī, 1: 36. In other contexts, al-akhīra means the Hereafter or the Afterlife, as in Q. 2 (S. al-Baqarah): 220, Q. 3 (S. Al 'Imrān): 22 and Q. 4 (S. al-Nisā'): 77.

³²²Bint al-Shāṭi', al-Tafsir al-Bayani, 1: 26.

³²³See Jansen, The Interpretation of the Koran, 71.

rhetoric) through which the i'jāz (inimitability) of the structure of the Qur'ān is recognized, and even the knowledge of the purposes of the statements of the Arabs is determined, lies in the knowledge of muqtaḍayāt al-aḥwāl (the exigencies of the situations)..... and the meaning of the knowledge of sabāb al-nuzul is the knowledge of the muqtaḍā al-ḥāl. 324

Such an attempt, although not the same in every respect, was actually made long before Bint al-Shāṭi'. Al-Rāzī, for example, when interpreting the same sūra, says in his al-Tafsīr al-Kabīr: "The word al-ḍuḥā implies the revelation to the Prophet, and al-layl the time of futūr al-waḥy, because in the revelation there is al-isti'nās (feeling of intimacy), and conversely, in the time of lassitude there is al-istīḥāsh (estrangement)."325

On the basis of the relationship between the asbāb al-nuzul and the meaning of words, Bint al-Shāṭi' seems to avoid mentioning a sabab al-nuzul report if the meaning of a word in the verse under discussion is already understood without its sabab al-nuzul. This is probably why she does not mention, for instance, the sabab al-nuzul of the fifth and sixth verses of surat al-Inshiraḥ (Q. 94): "But lo! with hardship goeth ease. Lo! with hardship goeth ease." It is beyond doubt that as a mufassira (a Qur'ān interpreter), she knows that the verses have a sabab al-nuzul. According to some mufassirūn, the sabab al-nuzul is the fact that the unbelievers condemned the Prophet and his followers for their ³²⁴ Al-Shāṭibī, al-Muwafaqat, .3: 225. See also al-'Akk, Uṣul al-Tafsīr, 102-3.

³²⁵Al-Rāzī, al-Tafsir al-Kabir, 31: 209.

poverty.326 This sabab al-nuzul report is not quoted by Bint al-Shāti' when explaining the meaning of the word al-'usr (hardship). This is because after trying to determine its meaning by using the inductive method, in which she compares the usage of the same word, as well as derivations of its root, in other verses of the Qur'an, and because she considers the definite particle al in the word as being li al-'ahd (definite particle), she concludes that the word al-'usr means the dank (distress), the 'anat (inconvenience), and the dig (restriction) that the Prophet felt in countering pagan society.327 From this interpretation, we should note two matters. First, according to her, on the basis of the "al li al-'ahd", we have, on the one hand, the specific hardship that the Prophet suffered. Second, the word 'usr, on the other hand, has the general meaning of hardship due to various causes, censure, and cruelty. In short, the meaning of al-'usr here is the general hardship that the Prophet suffered. This meaning, according to her, is sufficiently clear. Therefore, a discussion of the sabab al-nuzul here is not necessary at all. It is very possible that she believes that the content of the above report, which includes a discussion of the general meaning of the word, provides no further important information. She adopts the same attitude towards Q. 99 (S. al-Zalzala): verses 7-8,328 whose meaning is clear without the sabab al-nuzul.329

³²⁶See al-Zamakhshari, al-Kashshaf, 4: 221; and al-Suyūti, Lubab al-Nuqui, 232.

³²⁷Bint al-Shāṭi', al-Tafsir al-Bayani, 1: 71-2.

³²⁸Bint al-Shāṭi', al-Tafsīr al-Bayanī, 1: 96-100.

It is typical of her not to include in her tafsir any external information that is unnecessary³³⁰ including reports on asbab al-nuzul.

III. The Issue Surrounding the Idea of the 'Ibra (Decisive Point)

One of the most controversial issues surrounding the asbāb al-nuzūl is the idea of the 'ibra, or the "decisive point," i.e., the interpretive factor that should be considered. Many scholars believe this to lie in the universality of expression, and not the specificity of the occasion, that is, al-'ibra bi 'umum al-lafz lā bi khuṣūs al-sabab. Some, however, support the contrary view, i.e., al-'ibra bi khuṣūs al-sabab lā bi 'umum al-lafz.³³¹ Bint al-Shāṭi' accepts the former opinion, declaring that it must be adopted " 'ala kull ḥal " (in any case).³³² When she interprets sūrat al-Mā¹ūn, for instance, she begins by mentioning the place and time in which the ³²⁹Al-Wāḥidī states in his Asbāb al-Nuzul that on the authority of Muqātil it is reported that there were two people, to one of whom a beggar came (to ask something). He then thought little of something he gave to the begging person, and said: "It is but nothing. We will only be rewarded for giving what we like." On the other hand, the other person disdained what he considered to be a minor sin, such as lying, and slander. He said: "God threatens with the fire only for a great sin". The seventh and eight verses were then revealed. See al-Wāḥidī, Asbāb al-Nuzul, 258. This sabab al-nuzul is not quoted by Bint al-Shāti' at all.

³³⁰See Bint al-Shāṭi', al-Tafsir al-Bayani, 1: 18; and Jansen, The Interpretation of the Koran, 71.

³³¹See Al-Zarkashī, al-Burhān, 1: 32; al-Zarqānī, Manāhil al-'Irfān, 1: 118-27; and Muḥammad ibn al-Sayyid 'Alawī al-Malikī, Zubdat al-Itqān fī 'Ulum al-Qur'ān (Medina: Maṭābi' al-Rashīd, n.d.), 20.

³³²See Bint al-Shāṭi', Muqaddima, 134; and idem, al-Tafsir al-Bayāni, 2: 40; 81; 97; 150; 167; and 183.

sūra was revealed. Afterwards, she gives some brief information about its sabab al-nuzul, saying:

They (previous interpreters) have said in terms of asbāb al-nuzul that the $su\bar{r}a$ was revealed concerning Abū Sufyān, al-'Āṣ ibn Wā'il al-Sahmī, al-Walīd ibn al-Mughīra, or Abū Jahl. Ibn 'Abbās reported that it was revealed concerning a $muna\bar{f}iq$ who had combined the characteristic of avarice (bukhl) with that of hypocrisy ($mura\bar{a}$). But, the al-'ibra (decisive point) in any case is the universality of the wording.³³³

The same treatment is applied by Bint al-Shāṭi' when dealing with the asbāb al-nuzul of Q. 68 (S. al-Qalam),³³⁴ Q. 103 (S. al-'Aṣr),³³⁵ Q. 92 (S. al-Layl),³³⁶ verses 335Bint al-Shāṭi', al-Tafsir al-Bayāni, 2: 80-1. When interpreting the word al-insān (man), she explains that among the mufassirūn there are two opinions. Some say that the word al-insān means all mankind. Others consider the word to apply only to the group of the unbelievers (al-mushrikūn), among whom were al-Walid ibn al-Mughira, al-'Aṣ ibn Wā'il and al-Aswad ibn 'Abd al-Muṭallib. This is based on the report transmitted by Ibn 'Abbās. Another report informs us that the sūra was revealed concerning Abū Lahb, or Abū Jahl. She then says: "We are not involved in the disagreement. However, the decisive point is the universality of the word, not the specific occasion on which the sūra was revealed." See also al-Ṭabarī, Jāmi' al-Bayān, 30: 187.

336Bint al-Shāṭi', al-Tafsir al-Bayāni, 2: 97. It is reported that the sūra was revealed concerning Abū Bakr al-Ṣiddīq and his spending of his treasure for the Muslim people, and in relation to Umayya ibn Khalaf and his greed. This is according to one report. Another report tells that it is about Abū al-Daḥdāḥ al-Anṣārī. She then says: "The decisive point in any case is the universality of the word." She argues that the structure of the verse Inna sa'yakum lashattā is clear in indicating all people. See also al-Ṭabari, Jāmi' al-Bayān, 30: 142-4; Ibn Kathīr, Tafsir al-Qur'ān, 4: 555-6; al-Wāḥidī, Asbāb al-Nuzul, 254-5; and al-Suyūṭī, Lubāb al-Nugul, 229-30.

³³³Bint al-Shāti', al-Tafsir al-Bayani, 2: 183.

³³⁴Bint al-Shāṭi', al-Tafsir al-Bayāni, 2: 39-40. In this passage, after quoting its sabab al-nuzūl that the sūra was revealed concerning al-Walīd ibn al-Mughīra al-Makhzūmī and Abū Jahl ibn Hishām al-Makhzūmī, she says: "That the revelation of the sūra was concerning al-Walīd and Abū Jahl does not indicate the essence of the specific occasion, because there is evidence according to which the universality of the word is altered to fit the specific event." The complete report on the sabab al-nuzūl can be seen in al-Suyūṭī, Lubāb al-Nuqūl, 218-9.

15-16 of Q. 89 (S. al-Fajr),³³⁷ and Q. 104 (S. al-Humaza).³³⁸ The problem here is that she does not articulate why she favors the 'ibra of the universality of the wording over that of the specificity of the occasion. However, it is very possible that she agrees with scholars who have already offered reasons for supporting it. Al-Ṭūfi (d. 715/1395), a Ḥanbali jurist, for example, mentions in his Sharḥ Mukhtaṣar al-Rawḍa two arguments. First, the authority lies in the divine word, not in its occasion. On this basis, it is obligatory to consider the expression (of the word), either in its universality ('umum) or its specificity (khuṣus), as it was revealed ibtida an (without any occasion).³³⁹ Above all, Ḥanafi jurists, like al-Bazdawi (d. 457/1090), and al-Sarakhsi (d. 490/1137) have insisted that the authoritativeness of universal ('āmm) words in the Qur'ān is qaṭ'ī (certain), as is the case with the khāṣṣ (particular) words. Accordingly, the 'āmm cannot be ³³⁷Bint al-Shāṭi', al-Tafsir al-Bayāni, 2: 150-1. The two verses read: 'As for man (al-insān), whenever his Lord tries him, and then is gracious and provides good things for him, he says: "My Lord has been gracious to me." But when He tries him by restraining his means, he says: "My Lord despises me." On this point, although some interpreters have identified the word al-insān with a certain group, namely: 'Utba ibn Abī Rabī'a, and Abū Ḥudhayfa ibn al-Mughīra (on the basis of Ibn 'Abbās' report), and Ubayy ibn Khalaf (based on the report of al-Kalbī and Muqātil), Bint al-Shāṭi', nevertheless, points out that al-insān means all people.

³³⁸Bint al-Shāṭi', al-Tafsir al-Bayāni, 2: 167. When dealing with this sūra which consists of the words humaza (slanderer) and lumaza (back-biter), she quotes some reports telling that the sūra was revealed with respect to the actions of some unbelievers, that is to say al-Akhnas ibn Shurayq, al-Walid ibn al-Mughira, and Ubayy ibn Khalaf, who slandered the Prophet. However, she seems to agree with al-Ṭabarī and al-Zamakhsharī, saying that it is possible the occasion is specific, but that the threats are universal, and apply to all people who perform such bad deeds.

³³⁹Al-Ṭūfī, Sharḥ Mukhtaṣar al-Rawḍa, 2: 503. See also al-Ghazālī, al-Mankhul min Ta'liqat al-Uṣul, edited by Muḥammad Ḥasan Haytū (Damascus: Dār al-Fikr, 1980), 151.

specified by a particular occasion.340 Second, most of the universal decisions, particularly on legal matters, were preceded by specific occasions, such as the ruling on zihār (a form of divorce), which was first revealed in the case of Aws ibn al-Ṣāmit, and the ruling on li'an (oath of condemnation) in the case of Hilal ibn Umayya.341 Accordingly, Ibn Taymiya holds that a verse which has a specific occasion (sabab) includes (mutanāwil) the given person in the sabab and those who are in the same situation (bi manzilatih).342 Bint al-Shāṭi"s agreement with the above reasons can be traced from her statement, for instance, with respect to the sabab al-nuzul of Q. 103 (S. al-'Aṣr). When dealing with verses 2-3 of the sura, which read: "Lo! man [al-insan] is in state of loss, save those who believe, and do good works, and exhort one another to truth, and exhort one another to endurance," she comments that the clear structure (al-siyaq 'ala zahirih) does not associate the word al-insan (man) with a specific person [as mentioned in the sabab al-nuzul]. The universal meaning in the word, she argues, can be seen clearly from the itlag (generalization) which is followed by the istithna (exception). The istithna is invalid if the word al-insan is restricted to certain people.³⁴³ It follows that, according to her, the authoritative aspect rests in the structure of the Qur'an's wording.

³⁴⁰See Muḥammad ibn Aḥmad al-Sarakhsi, Uṣul al-Sarakhsi, edited by Abū al-Wafā' al-Afghāni (Hayderabad: Lajnat Iḥyā' al-Ma'ārif al-'Uthmāniya, 1952), 1: 132; and 'Alā' al-Din 'Abd al-'Azīz ibn Aḥmad al-Bukhārī, Kashf al-Asrār 'an Uṣul Fakhr al-Islām al-Bazdawi, edited by Muḥammad al-Mu'taṣim bi Allāh (Beirut: Dār al-Kitāb al-'Arabī, 1991), 1: 197 and 587.

³⁴¹See Al-Ṭūfī, Sharḥ Mukhtaṣar al-Rawḍa, 2: 503; al-Zarkashī, al-Burhān, 1: 32; and al-Zarqānī, Manāhil al-'Irfan, 1: 118-20.

³⁴²Ibn Taymiya, Muqaddima, p. 37. See also Rippin, "The Qur'anic Asbāb al-Nuzul Material," 51.

On the contrary, some Mālikī and Shāfi'ī jurists who insist that the decisive point lies in the specificity of the occasion, argue, for instance,³⁴⁴ that there are some verses that should be recognized as consisting of specific messages, even though the structure of their wording points to general meanings. An example is verse 115 of Q. 2 (S. al-Baqara): "Wa lillāhi l-mashriqu wa l-maghribu fa aynamā tuwallū fa thamma wajhu llāhi Inna llāha samī un 'alīm." Many reports tell us that the verse was revealed in the context of a situation where some travellers were confused about the direction of the qibla. They then performed prayer (salā) facing in the wrong direction. This situation was then reported to the Prophet, to whom the verse was then revealed. According to ³⁴³Bint al-Shāṭi', al-Tafsir al-Bayani, 2: 81.

³⁴⁴There are, at least, four logical arguments that they have set forth with respect to this point: (1) If the revelation were not specific for a given occasion (sabab), it would be possible to omit the occasion [from the message of the revelation]; (2) if not, there would be no rāwi (transmitter) willing to transmit a riwāya (report) on a sabab al-nuzul for there would be no benefit at all in so doing; (3) if not specific, the revelation would not be sent down after a certain occasion; and (4) the divine message that is revealed in the case of a certain occasion constitutes a response to it. The response must be suitable to the occasion. This accordance takes place only with the particularity of the message for the given occasion. These arguments seem to be circular, and not strong. Therefore, the majority (jumhūr) of scholars reject them. To see their rejection, see al-Ṭūfī, Sharḥ Mukhtaṣar al-Rawḍa, 2: 505-9; and al-Zarqānī, Manāhil al-'Irfān, 1: 123-7.

³⁴⁵This verse is translated by Ahmed Ali: "To God belong the East and the West. Wherever you turn, the glory of God is every where. All-pervading is He and all-knowing."

³⁴⁶See al-Wāḥidī, Asbāb al-Nuzul, 20; al-Suyūṭī, Lubāb al-Nuqul, 27; and al-Zamakhsharī, al-Kashshāf, 1: 90.

those who favor the particularity of the occasion over the universality of the wording, the state of ignorance as to the direction of the qibla specifies the verse, meaning that only in that situation is a Muslim allowed not to face the qibla when performing prayer.³⁴⁷ They argue that if one does not take into account the sabab al-nuzul of the above verse, one would have to say that every Muslim in any situation is allowed to face any direction he or she pleases when performing prayer (ṣalā). However, this understanding is clearly wrong, because it contradicts the meaning of other verses, like verse 144 of the same suīra,³⁴⁸ which orders Muslims to turn their face toward the qibla. In the light of linguistic analysis, it seems that they interpret the word aynamā in verse 115 with ilā ayyat jiha (to whatever direction). Thus without taking into consideration the sabab al-nuzul, verses 115 and 144 would in all appearance contradict one another.³⁴⁹

What then does Bint al-Shāṭi' have to say on this point? Unfortunately, one cannot be certain of her opinion, because she has not dealt with the above ³⁴⁷Muḥammad ibn Aḥmad al-Quṛtubi, al-Jāmi' li Aḥkām al-Qur'ān (Cairo: Dār al-Kutub al-Miṣriya, 1967), 2: 80-1. See also Andrew Rippin, "The Function of Asbāb al-Nuzul in Qur'ānic Exegesis," in BSOAS 51 (1988), 12-4.

³⁴⁸Verse 144 says: "We have seen you turn your face to the heavens. We shall turn you to a Qiblah that will please you. So turn towards the Holy mosque, and turn towards it wherever you be. And those who are recipients of the Book surely know that this is the truth from their Lord; and God is not negligent of all that you do."

³⁴⁹Contradiction between Qur'anic verses is, as the Qur'an (4: 81) says, impossible. To deal with those verses that seem (in fact, they are not) to be contradictory to one another, some scholars try to understand them, using the concept of naskh (abrogation) and the science of asbab al-nuzul. See al-Qurtubi, al-Jami' li Aḥkam al-Qur'an, 1: 80-3.

verses in particular, or verses relating to aḥkām (Islamic legal prescriptions) in general. However, we can assume that in keeping with her belief in al-'ibra bi 'umum al-lafz lā bi khuṣūs al-sabab 'alā kull ḥal̄, Bint al-Shāṭi' would probably agree with what al-Zamakhsharī says in his al-Kashshāf when interpreting verse 115:

[Wa lillāhi l-mashriqu wa l-maghribu] means that the countries in the East and the West, and all the earth belong to Allāh, who is the Owner of them and in charge of them. [Fa aynamā tuwallū] means that in any place you do al-tawliya, meaning turning your faces to the qibla on the basis of the verse (verse 144 of sūrat al-Baqara): Fawalli wajhaka shaṭra l-masjidi l-ḥarāmi wa ḥaythumā kuntum fa wallū wujūhakum shaṭrahu, the glory of Allāh is everywhere. The meaning of verse 115 is that if you are kept away from performing prayer in the al-Masjid al-Ḥarām or in Bayt al-Maqdis, I (God) make all the earth a mosque. Therefore, perform prayer in any place you want, do al-tawliya there, because the tawliya is allowed in all places, not only in a mosque, but also in other places.³⁵⁰

From his statement, one can say that, philologically speaking, al-Zamakhsharī interprets the word aynamā as meaning fī ayy makānin (in any place), not with ilā ayyat jiha (to whatever direction). This interpretation is supported by an inductive approach through which he finds that verses 115 and 144 are not contradictory to one another, and that verse 144 even interprets verse 115.

³⁵⁰Al-Zamakhshari, al-Kashshaf, 1: 90.

Conclusion

As far as the study of Bint al-Shāṭi"s method is concerned in this thesis, we can conclude the following.

It is clear that Bint al-Shāṭi''s method of interpreting the Qur'ān is neotraditionalist in nature, to borrow Rippin's term.³⁵¹ The cross-referential approach, the concept of *irtibā*ṭ and the usage of asbāb al-nuzul reports were all methods familiar to earlier interpreters. She goes beyond this traditional approach, however, by introducing some new theories and applications. This is what she means in part by her phrase al-tajdīd fī al-tafsīr (renewal in the field of interpretation).³⁵²

In developing her own style of interpretation, she was critical of past exegetes who used similar tools. This was particularly true of the cross-referential method, which, to her, was never correctly applied, a phenomenon resulting from the tendency on the part of interpreters to project their sectarian beliefs onto the Qur'ān on the one hand, and to import extraneous sources into their commentaries on the other. She also maintains that many of the classical reflections constitute "forced" interpretations and cases of "mis-oriented" i'jāz. This is why she often criticizes previous interpretations. The cross-referential approach that she applied is aimed at correcting these erroneous ideas. She may therefore be regarded, according to Hoy's definition,³⁵³ as a "critical monist" interpreter in the sense that she believes that there is necessarily only one "best" interpretation of the Qur'an, and that the best is her own interpretation.

³⁵¹ See Rippin, Muslim, 94.

³⁵² See Bint al-Shāṭi', al-Shakhṣiya al-Islāmiya: Dirāsa Qur'āniya (Beirut: Dār al-'Ilm li al-Malāyīn, 1977), 169.

Theoretically speaking, her cross-referential method is based on the idea that the Qur'ān is a unity, and therefore capable of self-interpretation. In this case, I agree with Murphy's thesis that the employment of scriptural texts is dependent in part on the "understanding of the nature of revelation." This method corresponds in part to Betti's theory of biblical interpretation, which consists in giving attention to the original linguistic meaning of a certain word under discussion, considering in the case of the Qur'ān the al-siyāq al-'āmm (general textual context) of all verses related to the subject matter, and trying to comprehend the al-siyāq al-khāṣṣ of a given verse. Her interpretation of Q. 103 (S. al-'Aṣr) represents her perfect application of the above hermeneutics. Nevertheless, when dealing with the issue of hurriyat al-'aqida to cite but one example, she falls into self-contradiction. This results from the fact that she does not apply the theory that she herself proposed. She does not take into consideration all the Qur'anic verses which have reference to this important issue.

³⁵³See David Couzen Hoy, "Is Hermeneutics Ethnocentric?", in The Interpretive Turn, ed. David R. Hiley, James F. Bohman and Richard Shusterman (Ithaca and London: Cornell University Press, 1991), 158.

³⁵⁴Nancey Murphy, "What has Theology to Learn from Scientific Methodology?" in Science and Theology: Questions at the Interface, ed. Murray Rae, Hilary Regan and John Stenhouse (Grand Rapids: William B. Eerdmans Publishing Company, 1994), 107.

In terms of her idea of irtibāṭ (interconnection) between verses and sūras, she once again lapses into inconsistency. Unlike other interpreters who applied the concept of irtibāṭ in accordance with the canonical order of revelation, she insists that irtibāṭ must be oriented to the chronological order. The anomaly may be seen in her treatment of Sūrat al-Qalam. There she tries to establish an irtibāṭ between verses 17-33 of the sūra, which were revealed in Medina, and verses 34-39 of the very same sūra, which were revealed in Mecca.

Once again, in dealing with the ashāb al-nuzul reports, Bint al-Shāṭi' introduces some confusion in regard to her criteria for the authenticity of the reports. Bint al-Shāṭi' tries to be careful in using such materials in her interpretation of the Qur'ān. Only those reports which she regards as authentic are relied upon. She maintains that the reports must be in agreement with accurate historical data. However, in some places, her assessment of the authenticity of the reports is not convincing, due to the self-contradiction between her theory and its application. Regardless of this weakness, the reports on ashāb al-nuzul, which she considers authentic, represent, according to her, an important tool for determining the meaning of words as required by the particular context (al-siyāq al-khāṣṣ) of a certain verse or sūra under discussion, and for explaining the logical relationship between the Qur'ānic wording and the particular situation in which a verse was revealed. In other words, her use of the asbāb al-nuzul is based on the consideration that there is an interactive relation between revelation itself and the circumstances in which the Qur'ān was revealed. Since revelation offers divine responses to social developments, it might be expected that the details in the asbāb al-nuzul reports could contribute to our understanding the Qur'ānic message. Nevertheless, like the majority of scholars (jumhūr al-'ulamā'), she points out that the decisive point (al-'ībra) in interpretation rests in the universality of words, not in the particularity of a given occasion. She emphasizes this idea by saying that one should adopt it in any case ('alā kull haī). She does not, however, articulate clearly her reasons for taking this position. In addition, she does not attempt to interpret the ayāt al-aḥkām (verses on Islamic legal prescriptions) in which the debate about the idea of al-'ibra (decisive point) is perhaps most crucial. In short, Bint al-Shāṭi''s theory and application of the asbāb al-nuzul is not a convincing one.

This is not to say, however, that all Bint al-Shāṭi''s method is useless or unproductive. As Boullata concludes,³⁵⁵ there are some amazing hermeneutical findings that result from her use of the cross-referential method. Besides avoiding thereby subjective interpretive projections, she finds that there is a hermeneutical relation between al-siyāq al-'āmm and al-siyāq al-khāṣṣ, and a reciprocal interconnection between words in the same context, as shown in her interpretation of Q. 103. We may accept the significance of this method, but it needs to be improved in future, and the inconsistency to which Bint al-Shāṭi' falls victim should be conscientiously avoided.

³⁵⁵See Boullata, "Modern Qur'an Exegesis," 113.

Bibliography

- Abādī, Muḥammad Shams al-Ḥaqq al-'Azīm. 'Awn al-Ma'būd Sharḥ Sunan Abī Dāwūd. Edited by 'Abd al-Raḥmān Muḥammad 'Uthmān. Beirut: Dār al-Fikr, 1979.
- Abbott, Nabia. Studies in Arabic Literary Papyri. 3 vols. Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1957-1972.
- 'Abd al-Bāqi, Muḥammad Fu'ād. Al-Mu'jam al-Mufahras li Alfāz al-Qur'ān al-Karim. Cairo: Maṭaba'at Dār al-Kutub al-Miṣriya, 1954.
- 'Abd al-Raḥmān, Yūsuf. "Muqaddimat Tafsir Ibn Kathir." Published together with Ismā'īl Ibn Kathir. Tafsir al-Qur'ān al-'Azīm. Beirut: Dār al-Ma'rifa, 1987.
- 'Abduh, Muhammad. Tafsir Juz' 'Amma. Cairo: Maţābi' al-Sha'b, n.d.
- Abū Ḥayyān, Muḥammad Ibn Yūsuf. Al-Tafsir al-Kabir al-Musamma bi al-Baḥr al-Muḥiṭ. 8 vols. Riyād: Maktabat wa Maṭābi' al-Naṣr al-Ḥaditha, n.d.
- Abū Zayd, Naṣr Ḥāmid. Mafhum al-Naṣṣ: Dirāsa fī 'Ulum al-Qur'ān. Cairo: al-Hay'a al-Miṣrīya al-'Āmma li al-Kitāb, 1990.
- -----. Ishkāliyāt al-Qira āt wa Aliyāt al-Ta'wil. Beirut: al-Markaz al-Thaqāfi al-'Arabi, 1994.
- -----. Al-Ittijāh al-'Aqli fi al-Tafsir: Dirāsa fi Qadiyat al-Majāz fi al-Qur'ān 'ind al-Mu'tazila. Beirut: Dār al-Tanwir, 1982.
- Aḥmad, Ḥanafī. Mu'jizat al-Qur'an fī Waṣf al-Ka'inat. Cairo: Maṭba'at Lajnat al-Bayan al-'Arabī, 1954.
- Al-'Akk, Khālid 'Abd al-Raḥmān. Uṣul al-Tafsir wa Qawa'iduh. Beirut: Dār al-Nafā'is, 1986.
- Aleem, Abdul. "'Ijazu'l-Qur'ān [sic]." Islamic Culture 7 (1933): 64-82 and 215-33.
- Amīn, Muḥammad. "A Study of Bint al-Shāṭi's Exegesis". M.A. thesis, McGill University, 1992.

- Arkoun, Mohammed. Rethinking Islam: Common Question, Uncommon Answers.
 Boulder, San Francisco, and Oxford: Westview Press, 1994.
- Arnaldez, R. Le Coran: Guide de Lecture. Paris: Desclée, 1983.
- Ash'arī, Abū al-Ḥasan 'Alī ibn Ismā'īl. Kitāb Maqālāt al-Islāmiyin wa Ikhtilāf al-Muṣallīn. 2 Vols. Edited by Hellmut Ritter. Istanbul: Maṭba'at al-Dawla, 1930.
- -----. Kitab al-Luma' fi al-Radd 'ala Ahl al-Zaygh wa al-Bida'. Edited and translated by Richard J. McCarthy. Beirut: al-Maṭba'a al-Kāthūlikiya, 1952.
- Al-'Asqalāni, Aḥmad ibn 'Alī ibn Ḥajar. Fath al-Barī bi Sharh Ṣaḥiḥ al-Bukhāri. 13 Vols. Edited by 'Abd al-'Azīz ibn 'Abd Allāh ibn Bāz. Beirut: Dār al-Ma'rifa, n.d.
- Al-'Aṭṭār, Dāwūd. Mujaz 'Ulum al-Qur'an. Beirut: Mu'assasat al-A'lami li al-Maṭbū'āt, 1979.
- Ayoub, Mahmoud M. The Qur'an and Its Interpreters. 2 vols. Albany: State University of New York Press, 1992.
- Al-Bājiqnī, Muṣṭafā Muḥammad. Manhaj al-Qur'ān al-Karīm fī Taqrīr al-Aḥkām. Cairo: al-Dār al-Jamāhīrīya, 1993.
- Baljon, J. M. S. Modern Muslim Koran Interpretation. Leiden: E. J. Brill, 1961.
- Banerjee, Nikunja Vihari. Language, Meaning and Persons. London: George Allen & Unwin Ltd, 1963.
- Beeston, A. F. L., T. M. Johnstone, R. B. Serjeant and G. R. Smith. Arabic Literature to the End of the Umayyad Period. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 1983.
- Betti, Emilio. Allgemeine Auslegungslehre als Methodik der Geisteswissenschaften. Tübingen: J. C. B. Mohr (Paul Siebeck), 1967.
- ----. Die Hermeneutik als Allgemeine Methodik der Geisteswissenschaften. Tübingen: J. C. B. Mohr (Paul Siebeck), 1962.
- Bint al-Shāṭi', 'A'isha 'Abd al-Raḥmān. A'da' al-Bashar. Cairo: Lajnat al-Ta'rīf bi al-Islām, 1968.

- Blachère, Régis. Introduction au Coran. Paris: Éditions Besson & Chantemerle, 1959.
- Al-Bukhārī, 'Alā' al-Dīn 'Abd al-'Azīz ibn Aḥmad. Kashf al-Asrār 'an Uṣul Fakhr al-Islām al-Bazdawi. 4 vols. Edited by Muḥammad al-Mu'taṣim bi Allāh. Beirut: Dār al-Kitāb al-'Arabī, 1991.
- Cragg, Kenneth. The Mind of the Qur'an. Chapters in Reflection. London: George Allen & Unwin Ltd, 1973.
- Cooke, Miriam. "Arab Women Writers." In Modern Arabic Literature. Edited by M. M. Badawi, 400-32. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 1992.
- Al-Dhahabī, Muḥammad Ḥusayn. Al-Tafsīr wa al-Mufassirun. 3 vols. Cairo: Dār al-Kutub al-Ḥadītha, 1961.
- Al-Dhahabī, Muḥammad ibn Aḥmad. Siyar A'lām al-Nubalā'. 23 Vols. Edited by Ḥusayn al-Asad. Beirut: Mu'assasat al-Risāla, 1986.
- Esack, Farid. "Qur'anic Hermeneutics: Problems and Prospects." The Muslim World 83 (1993): 118-41.
- Ess, Josef van. Theologie und Gessellschaft im 2. und 3. Jahrhundert Hidschra. 6 Vols. Berlin & New York: de Gruyter, 1992.
- ------. "Verbal Inspiration? Language and Revelation in Classical Islamic Theology." 177-94. In The Qur'an as Text. Edited by Stefan Wild. Leiden: E.
 J. Brill, 1996.
- Gadamer, Hans-Georg. Truth and Method. Translated by Sheed and Ward Ltd., and edited by Garrett Barden and John Cumming. New York: the Crossroad Publishing Company, 1988.
- -----. "The Universality of the Hermeneutical Problem." Translated by David E. Linge. 147-58 in The Hermeneutic Tradition from Ast to Ricoeur. Edited by Gayle L. Ormiston and Alan D. Schrift. Albany: State University of New York Press, 1990.
- Gātje, Helmut. The Qur'an and its Exegesis. Translated by Alford T. Welch London and Henley: Routledge & Kegan Paul, 1971.
- Al-Ghazālī, Abū Ḥāmid Muḥammad ibn Muḥammad. Jawāhir al-Qur'ān. Beirut: Dār al-Kutub al-'Ilmīya, 1988.

- -----. Al-Mankhul min Ta'liqāt al-Uṣul. Edited by Muḥammad Ḥasan Haytū. Damascus: Dār al-Fikr, 1980.
- Graham, William A. "The Earliest Meaning of 'Qur'an'." Die Welt des Islams 23-24 (1984): 360-77.
- Grondin, Jean. Introduction to Philosophical Hermeneutics. Translated by Joel Weinsheimer. New Haven and London: Yale University Press, 1994.
- Haleem, M. A. S. Abdel. "Context and Internal Relationships: Keys to Quranic Exegesis. A Study of Surat al-Rahman (Qur'an Chapter 53). In Approaches to the Qur'an. Edited by G. R. Hawting, Abdul-Kader and A. Shareef. London and New York: Routledge, 1993.
- Hallaq, Wael B. A History of Islamic Legal Theories. Cambridge University Press, 1997.
- Al-Hamadhāni, al-Qādi 'Abd al-Jabbār ibn Ahmad. Mutashābih al-Qur'ān. Edited by 'Adnān Muḥammad Zurzūr. Cairo: Dār al-Turāth, n.d.
- Harel, Yaron. "Jewish-Christian Relations in Aleppo as Background for the Jewish Response to the Events of October 1850." International Journal of Middle East Studies 30, 1, 1998: 77-96.
- Hirsch, E. D., Jr. Validity in Interpretation. New Haven and London: Yale University Press, 1967.
- Hoffman-Ladd, Valerie J. "'A'isha 'Abd al-Raḥmān." In The Oxford Encyclopedia of the Modern Islamic Word, edited by John L. Esposito, 1: 4-5. New York; Oxford: Oxford University Press, 1995. Vol. 1. Pp. 4-5.
- Hourani, G. F. "The Qur'an's Doctrine of Prophecy." 175-81. In Logos Islamikos: Studia Islamica in Honorem Georgii Michaelis Wickens. Edited by Roger M. Savory and Dionisius A. Agius. Toronto: Pontifical Institute of Mediaeval Studies, 1984.
- Hoy, David Couzen. "Is Hermeneutics Ethnocentric?." 155-75. In The Interpretive Turn. Edited by David R. Hiley, James F. Bohman and Richard Shusterman. Ithaca and London: Cornell University Press, 1991.
- Hudson, Michael C. Arab Politics: the Search for Legitmacy. New Haven and London: Yale University Press, 1977.

- Ibn 'Arabī, Muḥy al-Dīn. Tafsir al-Qur'ān al-Karīm. Beirut: Dār al-Yaqza al-'Arabīya, 1968.
- Ibn Isḥāq, Muḥammad, ibn Yasār. Kitāb al-Siyar wa al-Maghāzi. Edited by Suhayl Zakkār. Beirut: Dār al-Fikr, 1978.
- Ibn Kathir, Ismā'il al-Dimashqi. Al-Sira al-Nabawiya. 4 Vols. Edited by Muṣṭafā 'Abd al-Wāḥid. Beirut: Dār al-Iḥyā' al-'Arabi, n.d.
- -----. Tafsir al-Qur'an al-'Azim. 30 Vols. in 4 tomes. Edited by Yūsuf 'Abd al-Raḥamān. Beirut: Dar al-Ma'rifa, 1987.
- Ibn Khallikān, Aḥmad ibn Muḥammad. Wafayāt al-A'yān wa Anbā' Abnā' al-Zamān. 8 vols. Edited by Iḥsān 'Abbās. Beirut: Dār Ṣādir, 1977.
- Ibn Manzūr, Muḥammad ibn Mukarram. Lisān al-'Arab al-Muḥiṭ. Rearranged by Yūsuf Khayyāṭ. Beirut: Dār al-Jīl and Dār Lisān al-'Arab, 1988.
- Ibn al-Nadim, Muḥammad ibn Isḥāq. Kitāb al-Fihrist. Beirut: Maktabat al-Khayyāṭ, 1966.
- Ibn Shākir, Muḥammad. Fawāt al-Wafayāt. 5 vols. Edited by Iḥsān 'Abbās. Beirut: Dār Ṣādir, 1973-1974.
- Ibn Taymiya, Ahmad ibn 'Abd al-Ḥalim. Muqaddima fi Uṣul al-Tafsir. Beirut: Dār Ibn Ḥazm, 1994.
- Ibn al-Zubayr, Aḥmad ibn Ibrāhīm. Milāk al-Ta'wil al-Qaṭi' bi-dhawi al-Ilḥād wa al-Ta'ṭil fī Tawjīh al-Mutashābih al-Lafz min Ay al-Tanzil. 2 vols. Edited by Sa'īd al-Fallāḥ. Beirut: Dār al-Gharb al-Islāmī, 1983.
- Al-Işfahānī, Ḥusayn ibn Muḥammad al-Rāghib. Al-Mufradāt fī Gharib al-Qur'an. Edited by Muḥammad Sayyid Kaylānī. Beirut: Dār al-Ma'rifa, n.d.
- Izutsu, Toshihiko Ethico-Religious Concepts in the Qur'an. Montreal: McGill University Press, 1966.
- Jāḥiz, 'Amr ibn Baḥr. Al-Bayān wa al-Tabyin. Edited by 'Abd al-Salām Muḥammad Hārūn. 4 Vols. Cairo: Maṭba'at Lajnat al-Ta'līf wa al-Tarjama wa al-Nashr, 1948.
- Jansen, J. J. G. The Interpretation of the Koran in Modern Egypt. Leiden: E. J. Brill, 1974.

- Jawhari, Țanțāwi. Al-Jawahir fi Tafsir al-Qur'an al-Karim. Cairo: Mușțafa al-Bābi al-Halabi, nd.
- Jeffery, Arthur. "The Qur'an as Scripture." The Muslim World 40 (1950): 41-55, 106-34, 185-206, and 257-75.
- Jomier, Jacques. "Aspects of the Qur'an Today." 260-70. In Arabic Literature to the End of the Umayyad Period. Edited by A. F. L. Beeston, T. M. Johnstone, R. B. Serjeant and G. R. Smith. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 1983.
- Al-Jurjāni, 'Abd al-Qāhir ibn 'Abd al-Raḥmān. Dala'il al-I'jaz. Damascus: Maktabat Sa'd al-Dīn, 1987.
- Juynboll, G. H. A. The Authenticity of the Tradition Literature: Discussions in Modern Egypt. Leiden: E. J. Brill, 1969.
- Kafāfī, Muḥammad 'Abd al-Salam, and 'Abd Allah al-Sharīf. Fi 'Ulum al-Qur'an: Dirāsāt wa Muḥāḍarāt. Beirut: Dār al-Nahḍa al-'Arabīya, 1981.
- Kandil, Lamya. "Die Schwüre in den Mekkanischen Suren." 41-57. In The Qur'an as Text. Edited by Stefan Wild. Leiden: E. J. Brill, 1996.
- Khalaf Allah, Muḥammad Aḥmad. Al-Fann al-Qaṣaṣi fi al-Qur'an al-Karim. Cairo:Maktabat al-Nahḍa al-Miṣriya, 1950-1.
- Khalidi, Tarif. Arabic Historical Thought in the Classical Period. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 1994.
- Khalīfa, Ḥājjī. Kashf al-Zunun 'an Asma' al-Kutub wa al-Funun. New York: Johnson Reprint, 1964.
- Khalifa, Muḥammad Muḥammad. Ma'a Nuzul al-Qur'an. Cairo: Maktabat al-Nahḍa al-Miṣriya, 1971.
- Khaṭṭābi, Ḥamd ibn Muḥammad. Bayan I'jāz al-Qur'ān. Published in Thalāth Rasa'il fi I'jāz al-Qur'ān. Edited by Muḥammad Khalaf Allāh and Muḥammad Zaghlūl. Cairo: Dār al-Ma'ārif, n.d.
- Khāzin, 'Alī ibn Muḥammad. Lubāb al-Ta'wil fī Ma'āni al-Tanzil. 4 Vols. Cairo: Maṭba'at al-Istiqāma, 1955.

- Khuli, Amin. Manahij Tajdid fi al-Nahw wa al-Balagha wa al-Tafsir wa al-Adab. Cairo: Dar al-Ma'rifa, 1961.
- Kister, M. J. "Haddithu 'an bani isra'ila wa-la ḥaraja: A Study of an Early Tradition." Israel Oriental Studies 2 (1972): 215-39.
- Kooji, C. "Bint al-Shāṭi': A Suitable Case for Biography?". In The Challenge of the Middle Eas. Edited by Ibrāhīm A. El-Sheikh et al. 67-72. Amsterdam: University of Amsterdam, 1982.
- Lory, Pierre. Les Commentaires ésotériques du Coran d'après 'Abd ar-Razzâq al-Qâshânî. Paris: Les Deux Océans, 1980.
- Al-Mālikī, Muḥammad ibn al-Sayyid 'Alawī. Zubdat al-Itqān fī 'Ulum al-Qur'ān. Medina: Maṭābi' al-Rashīd, n.d.
- Martin, Richard C. Islamic Studies: A History of Religions Approach. Upper Saddle River: Prentice Hall, 1996.
- Meynet, Roland, Louis Pouzet, Naila Farouki, and Ahyaf Sino. Ṭariq al-Taḥlil al-Balaghi wa al-Tafsir: Taḥlilat Nuṣuṣ min al-Kitab al-Muqaddas wa min al-Hadith al-Nabawi. Beirut: Dār al-Mashriq, 1993.
- Mir, Mustansir. Coherence in the Qur'an: A Study of Işlahi's Concept of Nazm in Tadabbur-i Qur'an. Indianapolis: American Trust Publications, 1986.
- ----. "The Sura as a unity: A twentieth century development in Qur'an exegeis." 211-24. In Approaches to the Qur'an. Edited by G. R. Hawting and Abdul-Kader A. Shareef. London and New York: Routledge, 1993.
- Al-Mizzī, Jamāl al-Dīn Abū al-Ḥajjāj Yūsuf. Tahdhib al-Kamāl fī Asmā' al-Rijāl. Edited by Bashshār 'Awwād Ma'rūf. 35 Vols. Beirut: Mu'assasat al-Risāla, 1992.
- Muqātil, ibn Sulaymān. Tafsīr al-Khams Mi'at Aya min al-Qur'ān. Edited by Isaiah Goldfeld. Shfaram: al-Mashriq Press, 1980.
- Murphy, Nancey. "What has theology to learn from scientific methodology?"
 101-26. In Science and Theology: Questions at the Interface. Edited by Murray
 Rae, Hilary Regan and John Stenhouse. Grand Rapids: William B.
 Eerdmans Publishing Company, 1994.
- Nasr, Seyyed Hossein. "The Qur'an and Ḥadith as Source and Inspiration of Islamic Philosophy." In History of Islamic Philosophy. Edited by Seyyed

- Hossein Nasr and Oliver Leaman. London and New York: Routledge, 1996.
- Al-Nasafī, 'Abd Allāh ibn Aḥmad. Tafsir al-Nasafī: Madārik al-Tanzil wa Ḥaqa'iq al-Ta'wil. Edited by Zakariyā 'Umayrāt. Beirut: Dār al-Kutub al-'Arabiya, 1995.
- Al-Nasafī, Maymūn ibn Muḥammad. Tabṣirat al-Adilla fī Uṣul al-Din 'Alā Ṭariqat al-Imām Abī Manṣūr al-Māturidi. 2 Vols. Edited by Claude Salamé. Limassol-Chyprus: al-Jaffān & al-Jābī Imprimeurs-Éditeurs, 1993.
- Nöldeke, Theodor. Geschichte des Qorans. Hildesheim & New York: G. Olms, 1970.
- Osborne, Grant R. The Hermeneutical Spiral: A Comprehensive Introduction to Biblical Interpretation. Downers Grove: InterVarsity Press, 1991.
- Paret, Rudi. "Der Koran und Die Prädestination [Besprechung von: Daud Rahbar, God of Justice]." 159-64. In Der Koran. Edited by Rudi Paret. Darmstadt: Wissenschaftliche Buchgesellschaft, 1975.
- Poonawala, Ismail K. "An Ismā'ili on the I'jāz al-Qur'ān." Journal of the American Oriental Society 108 (1988): 379-85.
- ----. "Muḥammad 'Izzat Darwaza's Principles of Modern Exegesis: A Contribution toward Quranic Hermeneutics." 225-46. In Approaches to the Qur'an. Edited by G. R. Hawting and Abdul-Kader A. Shareef. London and New York: Routledge, 1993.
- Al-Qasṭalāni, Aḥmad ibn Muḥammad. Irshād al-Sāri li Sharḥ Ṣaḥiḥ al-Bukhāri. 15 Vols. Beirut: Dār al-Fikr, 1990.
- Al-Qurtubi, Muḥammad ibn Aḥmad. Al-Jāmi' li Aḥkām al-Qur'ān. 20 vols in 10 tomes. Cairo: Dār al-Katib al-'Arabi li al-Ṭibā'a wa al-Nashr, 1967.
- Qutb, Sayyid. Fi Zilal al-Qur'an. 30 vols. in 6 tomes. Cairo: Dar al-Shuruq, 1988.
- Rahman, Fazlur. Islam. Chicago and London: University of Chicago Press, 1979.
- ----. Islam and Modernity: Transformation of an Intellectual Tradition. Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1982.
- Al-Rāzī, Muḥammad ibn 'Umar Fakhr al-Dīn. Al-Tafsīr al-Kabīr. 32 vols. Beirut: Dār Iḥyā' al-Turāth al-'Arabī, n.d.

- Rejwan, Nissim. Arabs Face the Modern World: Religous, Cultural, and Political Responses to the West. Gainesville: University Press of Florida, 1998.
- Riddlle, Peter G. "The Transmission of Narrative-Based Exegesis in Islam: al-Baghdādī's Use of Stories in his Commentary on the Qur'ān and a Malay Descendent." 57-80. In Islam: Essays on Scripture, Thought & Society. Edited by Peter G. Riddlle and Tony Street. Leiden: E. J. Brill, 1997.
- Ridā, Muḥammad Rashīd. Tafsir al-Qur'an al-Ḥakim (known as Tafsir al-Manar).
 12 vols. Cairo: Dār al-Manār, 1954.
- Rippin, Andrew L. "The Function of Asbāb al-Nuzul in Qur'ānic Exegesis." BSOAS 51 (1988): 1-20.
- ----. Muslims: Their Religious Beliefs and Practices. Volume 2: The Contemporary Period. London & New York: Routledge, 1995.
- -----. "The Qur'anic Asbāb al-Nuzūl Material: An Analysis of Its Use and Development". Ph.D. diss., McGill University, 1981.
- Robinson, Neal. Discovering the Qur'an: A Contemporary Approach to a Veiled Text. London: SCM Press Ltd., 1996.
- Al-Rummānī, 'Alī ibn 'Īsā. Al-Nukat fī I'jāz al-Qur'ān. Published in Thalāth Rasā'il fī I'jāz al-Qur'ān. Edited by Muḥammad Khalaf Allāh and Muḥammad Zaghlūl. Cairo: Dār al-Ma'ārif, n.d.
- Sabi'i, Abāza. "Bint al-Shāṭi'." In Contemporary Arab Writers: Biographies and Autobiographies, edited by Robert B. Campbell. 1: 360-3. Beirut: In Kommission bei Franz Steiner Verlag Stuttgart, 1996.
- Ṣādiq, Muḥammad al-Ṣāliḥ. Al-Bayān fī 'Ulum al-Qur'ān. Algiers: al-Mu'assasa al-Waṭaniya li al-Kitāb, 1989.
- Al-Sarakhsi, Muḥammad ibn Aḥmad. Uṣul al-Sarakhsi. 4 vols in 2 tomes. Edited by Abū al-Wafā' al-Afghāni. Hyderabad: Lajnat Iḥyā' al-Ma'ārif al-'Uthmāniya, 1952.
- Shaḥrūr, Muḥammad. Al-Kitāb wa al-Qur'ān: Qira'a Mu'āṣira. Damascus: al-Ahālī li al-Ṭibā'a wa al-Nashr wa al-Tawzī', 1990.

- Al-Shāṭibī, Ibrāhīm ibn Mūsā. Al-Muwāfaqāt fī Uṣul al-Aḥkām. 4 Vols. Edited by Muḥammad Muḥy al-Dīn 'Abd al-Ḥāmid. Cairo: Maktabat wa Maṭba'at Muḥammad 'Alī Ṣubayḥ wa Awlādih, 1969.
- Shipler, David K. Arab and Jews: Wounded Spirits in a Promised Land. New York: Times Books, 1986.
- Sid, Muhammad 'Ata. "The Hermeneutical Problem of the Qur'an in Islamic History." Ph.D. Dissertation, Temple University, 1975.
- Starkey, Paul. "'A'isha 'Abd al-Raḥmān." In Encyclopedia of Arabic Literature.

 Edited by Julie Scott Meisami and Paul Starkey. London and New York:
 Routledge, 1998.
- Stetkevych, Jaroslav. "Arabic Hermeneutical Terminology: Paradox and the Production of Meaning." Journal of Near Eastern Studies 48 (1989): 81-96.
- -----. Muḥammad and the Golden Bough. Bloomington and Indianapolis: Indiana University Press, 1996.
- Al-Suyūṭi, Jalāl al-Dīn 'Abd al-Raḥmān. Al-Itqān fī 'Ulum al-Qur'ān. Cairo: Dār al-Turāth, n.d.
- -----. Lubāb al-Nuqul fi Asbāb al-Nuzul. Beirut: Dār Iḥyā' al-'Ulūm, 1978.
- -----. Al-Mukhtār min Kitāb al-Itqān fī 'Ulum al-Qur'ān. Beirut: Dār al-Kitāb al-'Arabī, n.d.
- Syamsuddin, Sahiron. "Al-Bāqillāni vs. al-Khaṭṭābi on Qur'ānic I'jāz Concerning the Truthful Information about Future Events." 3-10. In Yudian Wahyudi et all. The Dynamics of Islamic Civilization. Introduction
 by Issa J. Boullata. Yogyakarta: Forum Komunikasi Alumni Program Pembibitan Calon Dosen IAIN se-Indonesia and Titihan Ilahi Press, 1998.
- Al-Țabari, Muḥammad ibn Jarir. Jāmi' al-Bayān fī Tafsir al-Qur'ān. 30 vols. in 12. Beirut: Dār al-Ma'rifa, 1986-7.
- ----. Tārīkh al-Rusul wa al-Muluk. Edited by M. J. de Goeje (et al.). Leiden: E.J. Brill, 1879-1901.
- Al-Ṭabaṭaba'i, Muḥammad Ḥusayn. al-Qur'an fi al-Islam. Translated by Aḥmad al-Ḥusayni. Tehran: Markaz I'lām al-Dhikrā, 1984.

- Tawfiq, Muhammad Amin. "Interpretation and Lessons of Surah al-Duḥā'."

 Majallatu 'l Azhar (1976): 7-16.
- Al-Tha'ālibi, 'Abd al-Raḥmān ibn Muḥammad. Al-Jawāhir al-Ḥisān fī Tafsir al-Qur'ān. Edited by 'Ammār al-Ṭālibi. 30 Vols in 5 tomes. Algiers: al-Mu'assasa al-Waṭaniya li al-Kitāb, 1985.
- Thomson, William. "Free Will and Predestination in Early Islam: A Critique and Appreciation." The Muslim World 40 (1950): 207-216.
- Al-Ṭūfī, Najm al-Dīn Sulaymān ibn 'Abd al-Qawīy. Sharḥ Mukhtaṣar al-Rawḍa. 3 vols. Edited by 'Abd Allāh ibn 'Abd al-Muḥsin al-Turkī. Beirut: Mu'assasat al-Risāla, 1988.
- Vajda, G. "Isrā'īliyyāt." In The Encyclopaedia of Islam. Edited by E. van Donzel, B. Lewis and Ch. Pellat. Leiden: E. J. Brill, 1978.
- Wahyudi, Yudian. "Ali Shariati and Bint al-Shāṭi' on Free Will: a Comparison." Journal of Islamic Studies 9, 1 (1998): 35-45.
- Wansbrough, John. Quranic Studies: Sources and Methods of Scriptural Interpretation. Oxford: Oxford University Press, 1977.
- Warnke, Georgia. Gadamer: Hermeneutics, Tradition and Reason. Stanford: Stanford University Press, 1987.
- Watt, W. Montgomery. "Early Discussions about the Qur'an." The Muslim World 40 (1950): 27-40.
- Weinsheimer, Joel. "Hermeneutics." 117-36. In Contemporary Literary Theory.

 Edited by G. Douglas Atkins & Laura Morrow. Amherst: The University of Massachusetts Press, 1989.
- Al-Zamakhshari, Maḥmūd ibn 'Umar. Al-Kashshaf 'an Ḥaqa' iq al-Tanzil wa 'Uyun al-Aqawil fi Wujuh al-Ta'wil. 4 vols. Beirut: Dār al-Kitāb al-'Arabi, n.d.
- Al-Zanjāni, Abū 'Abd Allāh. Tārikh al-Qur'ān. Beirut: Mu'assasat al-A'lami li al-Maṭbū'āt, 1969.
- Al-Zarkashi, Muḥammad ibn 'Abd Allah. Al-Burhān fī 'Ulum al-Qur'ān. 4 vols. Edited by Muḥammad Abū al-Faḍl Ibrāhim. Cairo: Dār Iḥyā' al-Kutub al-'Arabiya, 1957.

Al-Zarqānī, Muḥammad 'Abd al-'Azīm. Manāhil al-'Irfan fī 'Ulum al-Qur'an. 2 vols. Cairo: Dār Iḥyā' al-Kutub al-'Arabīya, 1962.